Two key special session measures awaiting action

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — The Missouri Senate today gave first round approval to a bill to repeal the tax on household goods and wearing apparel.

The sponsor, Sen. William J. Cason, D-Clinton, said the bill is unfairly administered and noted that voters, by a 2-1 margin, called for its repeal.

The loss of revenue to the state is estimated at $14,289,315. Sen. William Waters, D-Liberty, asked where the lost revenue will be made up.

Cason suggested more than $5 million could be obtained by cutting out of the governor's proposed budget for 1974-75 a new program to combat mental retardation in newborn children.

Sen. A. Clifford Jones, R-Brentwood, said the question on how the tax loss can be recovered was premature. "It's really up in the air," he said.

Gov. Christopher S. Bond has warned that repealing the tax without finding an alternate source of revenue would put the state in a tight fiscal situation. The governor's proposed budget for next year projects a $17 million deficit and he said the state this year is expected to have a $15 million deficit.

Meanwhile, the House also took up the household goods tax and got into a long debate over an amendment that would eliminate reimbursement by the state, leaving the problem up to cities and counties.

In other action the House approved and sent to the Senate a bill rewriting language in the merit system law. It includes the Office Administration, now a year old. All agencies mentioned in the bill already are in the merit system.

Missouri House and Senate conference committees continued work on two key session bills without reaching agreement.

One would reorganize state government and one would lower the speed limit.

The special session will wind up Friday at midnight.

The House Monday gave tentative approval to a bill to allow right turns on red lights anywhere in the state, except when a governmental body posts a sign prohibiting it. A motorist would have to make a full stop and yield to cross traffic before making the right turn.

The House and Senate conference committee on the speed limit bills discussed a possible compromise on letting the state Highway Commission set the speed limit.

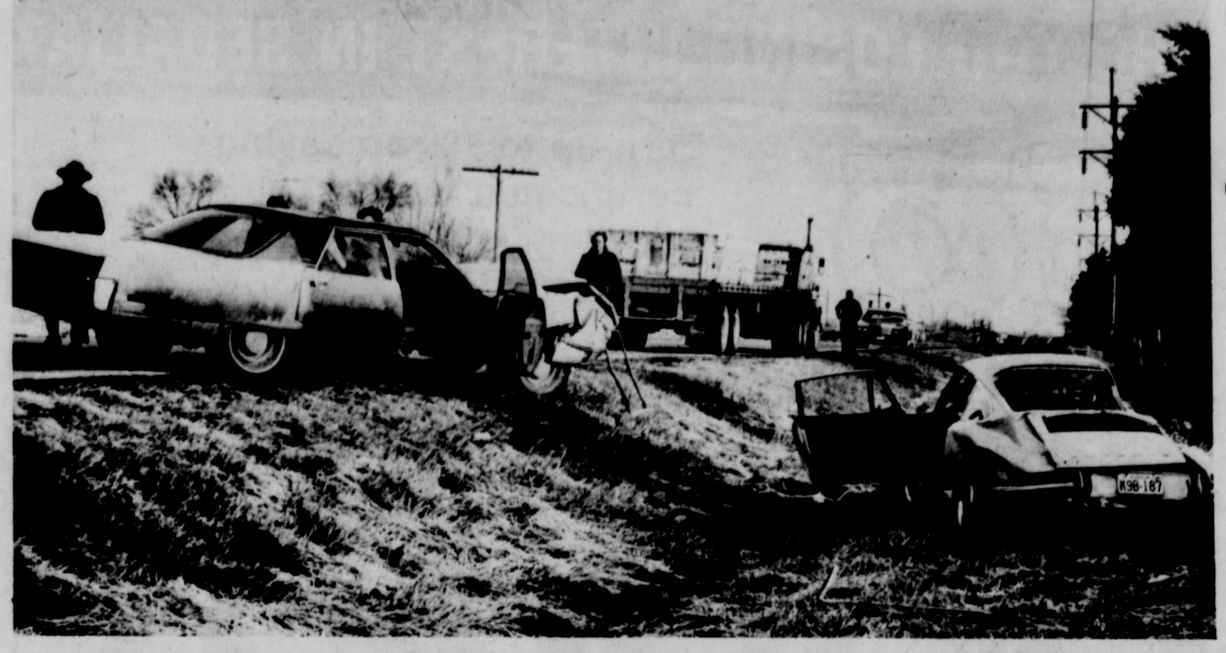

The Senate bill allows the legislature to set the limit at 55 m.p.h. and the House bill would have the governor set the limit to conform with federal law.

The House, on a vote of 89-63, tabled a bill to have the Public Service Commission disallow advertising costs for utilities when justifying rate increases, if the advertising increases the use or distribution of electric or gas power.

The Senate Monday gave tentative approval to bills which would:

—Provide a second judge for the 20th Judicial Circuit of Franklin, Gasconade and Osage counties.

—Revise a Supreme Court rule to restrict actions by a plaintiff in dismissing a court action.

Tuesday morning mishap

Four persons were injured at 8:45 a.m. Tuesday when a late-model Porsch went out of control in the southbound lane of South Highway 65 near Route V and was struck by a northbound vehicle. Both vehicles were extensively damaged and all four persons occupying the cars were taken by ambulance to Bothwell Hospital.

Two-car collision injures four

Four persons were injured in a two-car accident one-half mile south of Route V on South Highway 65 about 8:45 a.m. Tuesday.

According to the Highway Patrol, a late-model Porsch, driven south by Marion C. Marcum, 23, Route 1, apparently went out of control on the ice-slick pavement, spun around twice on the highway and into the northbound lane where it was struck in the right side by a 1972 Chrysler driven north by Permelia Susan Wickern, 52, Lakeview Heights.

The impact of the collision smashed in the right side of the Porsch, ripped away the windshield and knocked the car into a ditch east of the highway.

Marcum, the Wickern woman and two passengers in the Wickern car were taken to Bothwell Hospital by ambulance.

Marcum was admitted, complaining of back, left arm and rib injuries. An ambulance attendant indicated that Marcum had trouble breathing enroute to the hospital.

Mrs. Wickern and her son, Don, 23, a passenger in her car, suffered lacerations of the chin, it was reported, while a second passenger in the Wickern car, Imogene Seely, 48, Lincoln, complained of apparent rib and chest injuries.

Both vehicles were extensively damaged and were towed from the scene.

The conditions of seven Sedalians injured in two separate head-on collisions Monday were improved Tuesday, a Bothwell Hospital spokesman indicated.

John Schondelmeyer, 1834 West Third, who was listed in critical condition after suffering internal injuries, Tuesday was reported still in serious condition. Two other persons injured in the accident, Alvin Cline, 1716 South Beacon, and Jene Viets, 1404 West Fifth, were reported in satisfactory condition. They are both in serious condition Monday.

In King murder case

Ray wins review of guilty plea

CINCINNATI, Ohio (AP) — James Earl Ray, 41, confessed slayer of civil rights leader Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., won a review of his guilty plea from the 6th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals today.

The appellate court, in a 2-1 decision, remanded Ray's petition for a review to the U.S. District Court in Nashville, Tenn.

The appeals court accepted Ray's contention that he was given improper legal advice in his 1969 guilty plea. It cited two letters written to Ray by Percy Foreman, then his attorney.

The letters revealed arrangments for Foreman to receive $165,000 from royalties on publications and movies based on Ray's case. Also, the letters indicated that Ray's share of the money would be delivered only on his plea of guilty with "no embarassing circumstances to take place in the courtroom."

Ray is serving a 99-year sentence in the Tennessee state penitentiary for the April 4, 1968, slaying of King in Memphis, Tenn.

The civil rights leader, in Memphis to support a strike by garbage collectors who belonged to the Teamsters Union, was shot to death as he stood on a motel balcony.

Ray later was extradited from London where he was arrested.

Ray's appeal alleged that attorney Arthur Hanes and later Foreman were more interested in funds to be derived from articles and books planned by Alabama author William Bradford Huie than in his defense. Ray further alleged that his own guilty plea was paramount to the financial success of the publications and a possible movie based on his case.

The appellate court noted that the original trial judge, Preston Battle, had thoroughly questioned Ray about his guilty plea, but said that "the allegations which are the subject of Ray's petition have never been tried upon their merits or resolved by any court — allegations which, if true, plainly negate any motion or idea that his guilty plea and his answers to Judge Battle were made voluntarily and intelligently."

The majority opinion was written by Judge William E. Miller.

Judge Anthony J. Celebrezze wrote in dissent that Ray had a duty to answer the trial judge truthfully when questioned about his guilty plea.

"The record discloses," Celebrezze said, "that the trial judge, in questioning Ray, very thoroughly inquired into the voluntariness of Ray's guilty plea and the consequences which would result therefrom."

Randall urges price ceiling for propane

(Democrat-Capital Service)

WASHINGTON — An immediate ceiling on propane gas prices was asked of the Federal Energy Commission Monday by Rep. William J. Randall, D-Mo.

In his letter to energy chief William Simon, Randall urged a rollback of prices to Dec. 1 levels and a 30-day freeze until it can be determined if propane gas prices are justified.

Randall, chairman of the legal and monetary affairs subcommittee of the Government Operations Committee, said his group would hold hearings Feb. 4-7 and that the Cost of Living Council would be asked to document the increases permitted for propane.

"I don't believe they can justify it or document it," Randall said.

"I am greatly disturbed by tremendous price increases respecting petrochemicals and propane," Randall added. "In addition to their many agricultural uses, petrochemicals are vital to the production of various plastics, including compounds used in most shoe manufacturing. Propane, of course, is the only fuel available for heating and cooking in many rural communities and small towns and by large numbers of mobile home residents."

Similar concern was voiced by Sen. Thomas F. Eagleton, D-Mo., who said, "None of the usual arguments advanced to justify higher prices for other fuels apply in the case of propane. Higher prices will not lead to increased production because propane is principally a by-product of natural gas, which remains under tight price controls. Trying to induce greater propane production through price under those circumstances is like trying to wag the dog with his tail."

In the Sedalia and Pettis County areas, LP gas prices have soared to as much as 35.9 and 36.9 cents per gallon, a jump of roughly 100 per cent since last August. Most suppliers at that time were selling LP for about 17 cents per gallon, sources reported.

Saying the propane was an item rural residents could not do without, Eagleton added: "This is a matter of urgent concern

Tentative approval for county budget

The Pettis County Court announced Tuesday that it has approved the 1974 budget requests from all county offices and agencies, with the exception of the Pettis County Extension Council.

Pettis County Clerk Mary Jane Wilson said the 1974 budget won't become official until after a public hearing on the budget Feb. 7.

Funds totaling $892,467.97 were appropriated by the court for the 1974 budget. A breakdown shows that the court has appropriated $251,142.50 to the county road and bridge fund.

The agencies supported by the general revenue fund were allocated $499,325.47.

Federal revenue sharing funds have been earmarked to pay for $132,000 of expenses in the county sheriff's department and the county fire department. A total of $10,000 has been set aside out of anticipated revenue sharing funds for miscellaneous expenses.

Walch said the court cut the Extension Council's budget request of $23,000 "because we thought that a $2,000 raise would be sufficient." The Extension Council last year was allotted $17,800 by the court. This year they were alloted $19,800.

Walch said the increase was granted because the Extension Council this summer must begin paying rent on its offices at the Federal Building, or move to a new location.

By appropriating federal revenue sharing funds to the operation of the sheriff's and fire departments, the court hopes to start 1975 about $95,000 richer than 1974, figures show.

Judge plans to order Nixon testimony in Ellsberg case

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A California judge said today he will order President Nixon to testify in person for the defense of John Ehrlichman in the Ellsberg burglary case.

Superior Court Judge Gordon Ringer said it will be the first time in U.S. history that a state court judge has taken such action.

Ringer, acting on a request by attorneys for Nixon's former top domestic adviser, said, "The court will sign and issue a properly prepared certificate ... commanding the President, the honorable Richard M. Nixon, to testify before this court on Feb. 25 and to appear on April 15."

The trial of Ehrlichman and two codefendants on charges of burglary and conspiracy is to start April 15. A pretrial hearing is set for Feb. 25.

"The court is persuaded," said Ringer, "that the honorable Richard M. Nixon is a material witness for the defense."

In Washington, presidential spokesman Gerald L. Warren refused comment on the judge's action until he could confer with Nixon's lawyers.

Attorneys for Ehrlichman had disclosed their plans for seeking the subpoena earlier in the day, saying they wanted the President to testify about Ehrlichman's role in the White House "plumbers unit."

"Basically, the information is in the President's speech of May 22," attorney Douglas Dalton said. "But that does not help us — the fact that he said it in his speech. That is hearsay evidence."

Dalton said he previously had approached Nixon's attorney James St. Clair about the matter. "I talked to St. Clair and asked if the President would voluntarily appear," said Dalton.

"He said he would advise him not to ... he said they wanted to be consistent, and this would not be the only effort to subpoena the President."

Dalton's comments in an interview came just before he was to present a motion for the subpoena at a hearing on charges of conspiracy and burglary against Ehrlichman. The charges involve the Labor Day 1971 break-in at the Beverly Hills offices of Dr. Lewis Fielding, a psychiatrist whose patients included Pengaton papers figure Daniel Ellsberg.

Ehrlichman was not required to appear at the hearing today, nor were codefendants G. Gordon Liddy and David Young.

More trouble in protest by truckers

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

More trouble flared along northeastern Ohio highways overnight as independent truckers carried their protest against high fuel costs and low freight rates into its eighth day.

At least two shooting incidents were reported.

The incidents followed a day of violence Monday during which police in Pennsylvania and Ohio reported arrests, gunshots, burned rigs and truckers being beaten and threatened.

Spokesmen for the truckers who are attempting to shut down traffic denied responsibility for the violence.

In Washington, D.C., Monday night, special presidential assistant W.J. Usery Jr. promised the truckers that help from the government was on the way and called for an end to the protest.

But George Rynn, president of the Council of Independent Truckers, said in Ohio that the protest would continue until the federal government took concrete action to alleviate the truckers' problems.

And newly formed truckers groups across the nation are calling for a national shutdown Thursday.

Pennsylvania State Police said they had received fewer trouble calls today after two days of sporadic violence in the western part of the state.

They said they had reports early today of rocks or bricks being thrown through the windshields of two moving trucks but said no one was injured.

Nixon wants further work on energy bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon today urged the Senate to send emergency energy legislation back to a conference with the House for further consideration.

In a letter addressed to Minority Leader Hugh Scott, Nixon said, "We have been able to make do without emergency legislation thus far, and I urge you and your colleagues to take the additional time required for developing a truly responsible product."

The letter specifically mentioned a provision designed to limit excess profits earned by the oil industry as one of "13 sections of the bill which presented difficulties."

Nixon asked the Senate and House to reconcile their differences over the legislation.

Scott said Nixon's letter backed a motion to recommit the bill to conference with the House. The motion is expected to be offered later in the day by Sen. Gaylord Nelson, D-Wisc.

Senate Majority Leader Mike Mansfield said he still planned to vote against the motion to recommit, but Senate Interior chairman Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., who last week flatly predicted passage of the bill, said today he could no longer forecast the outcome.

Nelson's motion is expected to include instructions to drop a controversial provision designed to prevent the oil industry from earning windfall profits.

Jackson blamed the effort to block the bill on "intensive lobbying" by the petroleum industry and the White House against the windfall profits provision. The industry and the administration reportedly organized a filibuster in December by Republicans and oil-state senators that prevented passage of the bill then.

The bill's opponents gained new strength Monday when Nelson, a northern liberal known to favor a windfall profits tax, announced his opposition to the bill on the grounds that it is unworkable. Nelson also objects to provisions in the bill that would suspend clean air requirements in order to permit the burning of dirtier fuels.

Fuel monitoring bill debated in hearing

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — A proposed law giving the Public Service Commission authority to monitor fuel supplies in the state is unneeded because the information already is available, oil industry representatives told a Senate Committee.

More than 50 representativees of oil jobbers and large companies battled the House-approved bill in a 5½-hour hearing that broke up early today.

James Mauze, the Public Service Commission chairman, and Rep. Richard DeCoster, D-Canton, defended the measure as a way to find out what happens to fuel once it gets to Missouri and how much is coming into the state.

The bill, also applying to coal, would allow the PSC to subpoena records of manufacturers, distributors and dealers to find out how much fuel they have on hand.

Oil industry spokesmen said they were not opposed to providing the information, but did not want to be regulated in any way by the PSC.

They said the information can be obtained from tax records supplied to the Revenue Department with the exception of heating oil, which could be added to the forms.

"This bill in no way regulates the industry nor does it seek to harrass the little man," Mauze said.

John R. Hahn, executive secretary of the Missouri Oil Jobbers Association, showed senators a 30-page set of forms that jobbers now have to fill out for federal and state officials under a new allocation program effective Jan. 15.

Revenue Department Director James R. Spradling said his department had enough to do in collecting taxes and did not want to get involved in the energy resource business.

A substitute bill being circulated but not introduced would have proved that the Revenue Department receive the information and pass it along to the PSC.

The Senate Roads and Highways Committee appeared to be opposed to the bill as worded and kidded Mauze for his slip-of-the-tongue reference to the oil refinery at Sugar Creek, near Kansas City, as "Sugarbush."

Rails and the crisis -- Part I

Tantalizing prospects of prosperity

By LEE LINDER
Associated Press Writer

The nation's railroads, in physical and fiscal decline for decades, see tantalizing prospects of renewed prosperity in the energy crisis. But, for the moment at least, it is doubtful they can grasp the opportunity.

The oil shortage aside, the railroads need more new equipment, especially for passenger service, and probably won't have it for at least two years. And they need hundreds of millions of dollars to rehabilitate track and roadbed for the modern, faster trains the public demands.

"It will take at least three years for railroad passenger service to get up to snuff," says Rep. Brock Adams, D-Wash., one of the authors of the new bill to bail out seven bankrupt Eastern roads, including the Penn Central, the nation's biggest.

Right now, the gasoline shortage already has boosted long-distance and commuter passenger traffic. The general figure used is 10 per cent, but the increase ranges from 3 per cent on some Philadelphia commuter trains to as much as 80 per cent on others such as the winter-peak New York-to-Florida Amtrak run.

Already, trains on some heavily traveled Eastern routes are showing the strain. They are overcrowded and often run late and use substandard cars.

The railroads say additional increases of as little as 5 per cent, especially on packed commuter trains, could produce the inconvenience and chaos that caused the exodus to other modes of transportation to begin with.

The bulk of today's railroad passengers ride commuter trains: roughly 453,000 people going daily to and from work, or into downtown areas to shop or relax. Most of the rest ride Amtrak, the government-backed corporation which runs all but eight of the nation's 210 passenger trains. Last year, Amtrak carried a total of 17 million riders, or about 46,500 daily. Even if that figure were to double this year — an impossibility because of the equipment situation — the Association of American Railroads figures it would, at best, accommodate 1 per cent of the nation's car drivers.

Freight traffic is in better shape, however, and more likely to hold any gains. The railroads, having willingly turned over their money-losing passenger trains to Amtrak in 1971, claim they can handle at least 15 per cent more coal and other merchandise without the need of new hoppers, gondolas and boxcars.

But within a year, if a prolonged gasoline shortage boosted freight tonnage as expected, a critical equipment shortage would occur. There now is an order backlog of more than 61,500 freight cars, which should be delivered this year. New orders will not be filled until sometime in 1975, or later.

Underlying and further complicating the situation is a huge uncertainty: How long will the gasoline shortage last?

The question is a key one and presents a dilemma for both industry and government.

If the crisis is relatively short, can they risk heavy financial outlays to upgrade equipment and facilities that might become superflous in a year or two?

Or will, as many experts predict, the cost of gasoline and diesel oil reach a level high enough to make rail travel and shipment permanently attractive again?

There are no hard answers at once, though the railroads would seem to prefer an orderly, gradual shift to any rush that would put intolerable strains on present equipment and facilities.

In any event, proponents of a strong rail system see dividends from the crisis, no matter what course is taken.

Here is a point-by-point look at the railroad situation, based on a thorough survey of experts in and out of the industry:

Freight: The railroad industry had its best freight year in history in 1973, with $14.7 billion in operating revenues. The Association of American Railroads, the voice of the country's 64 major roads and 448 smaller lines, says the figure could jump 15 per cent this year, a large share of it in hauling coal.

But the energy unknowns loom large.

"I don't know what's going to happen," says W. Graham Claytor Jr., president of the Southern Railway, one of the most profitiable in the nation. But on freight, he adds, "if there's a great deal of pressure, I am sure we can move faster and unload faster."

But so far there has been no real pressure from shippers.

A survey of major firms showed that they aren't ready for wholesale switching from highway to rail as long as their trucks are getting the fuel they need.

Some shippers, though, are making emergency plans to divert goods if the oil situation worsens — which no one yet is predicting — or if truck transport becomes too costly.

Claytor insists the answer to the energy crunch is to put more freight on the rails. But he acknowledged that trucks have their role in America's transportation.

"For very short hauls, and for light density branch lines, railroad traffic is wasteful in comparison to trucks," Claytor says. "But for long distances we can carry four times as much freight with the same amount of fuel."

Even so, shippers like the door-to-door conveniences and speed of trucks and their records of less pilferage and damage to goods than boxcar shipment.

Passenger service: While shippers maintain a wait-and-see attitude, passenger carriers already are getting and expect more. A 15 per cent increase over last year is used by some rail and government men, but Amtrak spokesman Edwin Edel says: "We just don't know how much the energy situation will increase demand."

Whatever the increase, it will not be easy to handle because of lack of cars, especially clean, comfortable, modern ones.

Most of the equipment used by Amtrak is more than 20 years old and completing its modernization will take years and billions of dollars. Meantime, the corporation plans to acquire 200 cars it once rejected unfit.

Edel explained that Amtrak has no choice since new cars can't be designed and delivered between now and 1977.

There also is the question of service.

★ ★ ★

"People want to ride trains if they can be assured that they can get a reservation, get a clean, safe ride and get there on time," says Hartke. "People don't like to be late."

Six out of 10 Amtrak trains that travel more than 300 miles are late, an average of 38 minutes.

Commuter lines: Equipment problems exist here, too, but officials in New York, Philadelphia, Chicago and Boston, where most of the nation's rail commuters live, hope to encourage businesses and factories to stagger starting and closing times to stretch ridership hours.

"We must get out of the 7-to-9 and 4-to-6 syndrome," says James G. McConnon, chairman of the Southeastern Pennsylvania Transportation Authority which subsidizes 812 Penn Central and Reading trains in the Philadelphia suburbs.

"If we could stretch it in the morning from 6-to-10 and in the evening from 3-to-7 it would make one heck of a difference in the passenger load and give us space to carry a lot more people when they want to."

Otherwise, warns William J. Ronan, chairman of the Metropolitan Transportation Authority in New York, which carries 200,000 persons every weekday, we will be "packing people in" and forced to limit any increase to around 15 per cent until there's more equipment.

Other factors: Besides passenger and freight cars, shortages also exist in steel wheels, wooden ties and tracks. The ties and tracks are needed to upgrade roadbeds, and without more of them efforts to make rail travel faster and more comfortable will slow down.

"The order backlog at the end of December was 23 million ties," says Randy Wingard of Koppers Co. in Pittsburgh, world's largest supplier of wood ties to railroads. "Production doubled in the last half of 1973...and we think the problem will be solved in 1975."

Wheels and tracks also are being produced at peak levels in plants that make them. And U.S. Steel Corp., one of the major suppliers, says concern about future needs had previously sidetracked expansion plans.

"No one wants to put maybe $10 million into some item and find out two years later it's not wanted," says a U.S. Steel spokesman.

Professionals credited with weekend safe thefts

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The weekend theft of three safes containing an estimated $175,000 in jewelry and antiques from two area department stores has been attributed to professional burglars, police said.

"This was obviously the work of professionals," said Lt. Mel Loyd of the Crestwood Police Department.

Police said the burglars apparently altered sophisticated burglar alarm systems at both stores Saturday while both stores were open so they would not function during the later breakin.

Two of the safes, containing an estimated $60,000 in merchandise, were taken from the Famous Barr Southtown store and the other, with about $115,000 in jewels in it, was taken from the Crestwood Famous Barr store in St. Louis County.

All three safes—opened and empty—were found in a ditch north of Ellisville about noon Monday.

The Southtown burglary was discovered at 10 p.m. Sunday after police received an anonymous telephone call reporting that someone was attempting to break into the store. The Crestwood safe was discovered missing early Monday morning when a watchman went to check on it after hearing about the Southtown incident.

Senate approves hike in workman's compensation

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — The Senate Labor Committee approved Monday night, despite industrial opposition, a bill to increase workman's compensation benefit. The vote was 4-2.

It would bring all employers under the law except farm and domestic servant employers with annual payrolls of less than $1,000.

The bill would also establish a maximum benefit for most workman's compensation claims of 66 2-3 per cent of the average weekly wage in the state as determined by the Division of Employment Security.

Other major changes would increase death benefits, allow the continuation of benefits to dependents of deceased workers to the age of 25 if they are enrolled in college, and extend the filing deadline from one to two years. It would also expand the occupational disease section and eliminate the "accident defense" as a cause of rejection.

The bill would remove the word "accident" from the law and substitute "occurrence" as a reason for filing for workman's compensation.

An industrial spokesman, Robert W. Herr, representing the Associated Industries of Missouri, attacked that provision. He said it would open the way to claims for afflictions which did not result from employment but simply happened while the individual was working, such as strokes and heart attacks.

He also objected to a portion of the bill which would allow total disability to persons who cannot return to their same employment after suffering an injury. This would allow a person who could work, but not in the same job, to qualify for extended workman's compensation, he said.

Herr also told the committee that the legislature should determine what the maximum compensation rate should be rather than allowing 66 2-3 per cent of the average wage in Missouri stand as the maximum, as the bill provides.

The removal of the word "accident" from the law would eliminate what attorneys testifying before the House Workman's Compensation Committee last week called the major way insurance companies avoid payment of workman's compensation claims.

They said that many employes injured on the job were forced either to perjure themselves or receive lessened or no benefits. The reason, they said, was that their injury could not be classified as an accident.

A representative of the American Insurance Association said his organization could live with the bill and called for the adoption of some sort of liberalized law so control over workman's compensation could be kept in the state.

If liberalization of the law is not accomplished, he said, the federal government will take over control of the program.

Also approved was a bill to increase salaries of employes of the Division of Workman's Compensation.

In other committee action, the House Consumer Affairs Committee heard testimony on a "truth in repairs" bill and on a measure that would keep collection agencies from harassing debtors.

No action was taken on either bill.

The repairs bill would require appliance and car dealers to give customers detailed estimates of parts and labor costs resulting from repair work, if requested by customers.

If the repair costs exceeded the itemized estimate by 10 per cent, repairmen would have to tell the consumer and get his consent for further work.

Harvey Tettlebaum of the attorney general's office said the bill's purpose was to protect consumers from outrageous bills, when only minor repair jobs were requested. He said the bill would probably drive shady repairmen out of the state.

The bill received the support of the Missouri Automobile Dealers Association. There were no opponents at the hearing.

Tettlebaum also supported a bill to stop debt collectors from harassing persons by using such tactics as early morning phone calls.

He said such tactic often included calling persons on the phone at 10-minute intervals after 2 a.m. and using abusive words to coerce debtors to pay sums as low as $25.

Some collection agencies phone parents whose children are not at home and ask, "Do you know where Johnnie is?" Such creditors also tell parents that absent children are injured in attempts to shake perents up, Tettlebaum said.

Four lobbyists for collection agencies spoke against the bill, saying most collections agencies do not practice such shady tactics. They said the bill would prohibit collectors from asking employes and neighbors where a missing debtor was, if not at home. The restrictions of the bill would cause amounts of debts collected to fall and would cause an increase in the cost of credit, they agreed.

Committee Chairman James Mulvaney, D-Jennings, spoke for another bill that would require protective valves and periodic repair checks on all natural gas pipelines. He said such protective measures would cut down on costly gas leaks and give persons "protection from the disaster of pipeline ruptures.

He said a recent leak in Chester, Ill., forced 7,000 persons from their homes. He said another leak in Franklin County resulted in an explosion that "devastated 75 acres of land."

He cited gas companies' statistics that showed that $15 million worth of natural gas was lost each year in Missouri because of gas leaks.

Navy is planning to 'use' energy crisis

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Navy is preparing to use the energy crisis as ammunition in its campaign for a bigger fleet.

Senior admirals will tell congressional committees in coming months that naval power is vital in keeping open the tanker routes from the Middle East and other oil producing regions.

Adm. Elmo R. Zumwalt Jr., chief of naval operations, sounded the keynote recently when he warned that the seas could become "our weak link" without adequate naval power because "we will be increasingly dependent on the seas to bring in our oil and other critical resources."

Zumwalt's remarks came at a special hearing arranged with the cooperation of a friendly House Armed Services subcommittee in Norfolk, Va., home of the Atlantic Fleet.

To the Navy's disappointment, the hearing made no impact outside the Norfolk area, but the Navy is certain to keep trying on Capitol Hill, where a new session has just started.

Top defense officials agree the fleet needs to be larger, but they are unlikely to go as far as the Navy would like.

In the past five years, the fleet has shrunk from 976 ships to 511 as older vessels were laid up to devote more money to modernization.

Pentagon leaders say they plan to build up the fleet to about 550-600 ships, but the great and rising cost of shipbuilding will keep the United States from ever having a fleet as big as it once did.

The downward trend will be reversed later this year when new advanced destroyers, attack submarines and other ships that Congress authorized in past years begin to join the fleet.

Both Navy and defense officials want to stress smaller, more austere ships in the future.

Teachers discuss program

Business education instructors from five high schools in the State Fair Community College district met Saturday with members of the SFCC business and office staff to discuss the office occupation program to be offered to district high school students next year at the college.

Nila Hibdon, dean of vocational-technical education, discussed with the instructors all course offerings that would be available to high school students next year.

Shirley Evans, business and office division chairman, explained that the program would be individualized and flexible enough to accommodate the needs of all participants. Instruction will be available, she said, in areas including legal, medical, educational and technical office work.

Also addressing the group was James Navara, director of the career education project at the college, who discussed the placement services available to the students under this program.

High school teachers attending the session were Evelyn Deininger, Green Ridge; Waunita Lovercamp, LaMonte; Marjorie Uhr and Melba VanVickle, Sedalia; Mary Folkerts and Jenny O'Donnell, Smithton; Louise Campbell and Ruth Schmidli, Warsaw.

SFCC staff members attending were Shirley Evans, Joann Billington, Juanita Goodwin, Nancy Catron, Carleda Williams and Harold Haden.

Changes in IRS system explained

An address on the history, functions and changes in the Internal Revenue Service by local IRS office manager Lacy Belt highlighted the Monday meeting of the Sedalia Rotary Club at the Ramada Inn.

Income tax information, Belt said, can be obtained by telephoning, toll-free, 800-392-4200. The administration of the IRS, Belt said, is divided into seven districts. Sedalia is in the St. Louis district.

The IRS, which was established under the 16th amendment to the constitution, currently employes more than 70,000 employes, Belt said.

Belt stressed that governmental programs, which he described as "by and for the people," should be paid by the people in the form of taxes. This system he indicated, is "the best in the world."

Also appearing before the group was Nelson Nix, who presented a brief account of his life.

Guests introduced at the meeting were Ted Lenger and Gene Rutherford, of Warrensburg; Richard Lambden, 2608 Wing; and high school students Jim Sanders, Smith-Cotton, and Barry Kueck and Randy Johnson, Sacred Heart.

Presiding at the meeting was club president Bob Phillips, with The Rev. Denis Craft offering the invocation. Belt was introduced by program chairman Bill Tweed.

Three Kentucky burley markets remain open

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Three burley tobacco markets remained opened in Kentucky Monday—at Carrollton, Lexington and Shelbyville.

There was a total of 1,606,443 pounds sold for an average of $88.02 per hundredweight.

Volume was up from Thursday, the closing day last week, when 881,227 pounds were sold for an average of $86.10 per hundredweight.

The high price Monday was paid in Lexington, where 1,181,032 pounds of burley were sold for $89.60 per hundred pounds.

At Shelbyville, which conducted its last sale Monday, buyers paid the low price of $81.05 per hundredweight for 129,993 pounds, while Carrollton buyers paid an average of $84.77 per hundredweight for 295,418 pounds.

Carrollton was slated to close Wednesday, but no closing date has been announced for Lexington.

Polling places approved

The State Fair Community College Board of Trustees Monday night approved the polling locations for the March 5 bond election, and passed a resolution calling for the election of two trustees on April 2.

The board approved 34 polling places, 28 in Pettis County and six in Benton County, for the $5.5 million bond vote, to provide funds for the construction of two permanent buildings on the junior college campus.

One of the buildings will be a combination library-classroom-media support area, while the other will be an area vocational building.

SFCC President Fred Davis told the board construction on the buildings could start as early as September if the bond issue is approved. He said completion would take 1½ years.

A two-thirds majority is needed for approval.

Davis said he has talked with five local school boards and has received unanimous support from all five for the bond election. He said he is scheduled to meet with all 10 school districts in the two counties before the election in an attempt to obtain their support.

Davis said he is concerned people will be confused about where to vote in the upcoming election. He said the college plans to publish lists of polling places and maps showing them.

The board election is to fill the expiring six-year terms of Dr. C. Gordon Stauffacher, 1313 West Broadway, and C. R. Leppert, Lincoln.

Candidates must be at least 30 years old, resident taxpayers in the district and U.S. citizens.

Davis said Stauffacher, a charter member of the board, has filed for re-election. Candidates must file with the college president's office by March 4.

In other action, the board authorized the hiring of 40 persons to teach night classes at the college.

Robert Woolery, dean of community services, told the board 630 students were enrolled in the evening classes already begun, with another 80 scheduled for classes starting later in the semester. He said he is confident the goal of 750 students for the night classes will be reached before all classes begin. He said 730 night students were enrolled last semester.

The board accepted the resignation of Carleda J. Williams, instructor with the disadvantaged and handicapped program in Warsaw.

Impeachment 'necessary'

COLUMBIA, Mo. (AP) — Watergate "has given us the opportunity to get back to the presidency of the Constitution," Arthur Schlesinger Jr., historian and former special assistant to President John F. Kennedy, said Monday night.

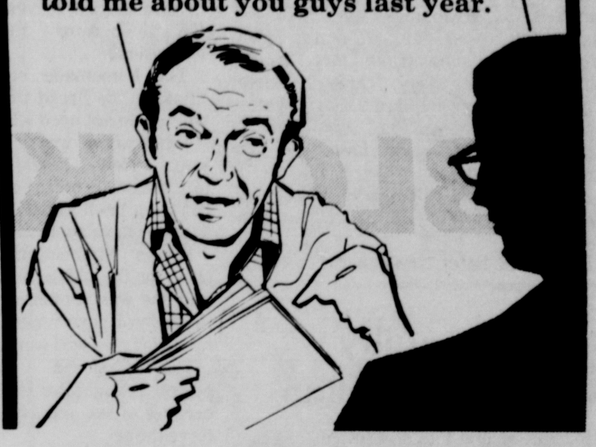

Speaking at the University of Missouri campus here, Schlesinger said President Nixon's impeachment is necessary to make the presidency constitutionally accountable again. The President has attempted to "break the presidency out of the system of constitutional accountability," Schlesinger charged.

He predicted at a news conference impeachment action would occur in the House within six months.

He did not feel impeachment proceedings would be harmful to the country, saying, "Keeping on a president . . . who has . . . abused his power will tear the country apart more than impeachment."

Drug sale guilty plea from Sedalian

Democrat-Capital Service)

COLUMBIA — A former Sedalia man pleaded guilty to a charge of sale of marijuana Monday morning in Boone County Circuit Court here.

Appearing in court was Dale Diefenbach, 27, Kansas City. Sentencing was postponed until March 25 pending a pre-sentence investigation by the State Board of Probation and Parole, Pettis County Prosecuting Attorney Gary Fleming said.

Diefenbach is charged with selling 112.3 grams of marijuana on Sept. 12, 1972, to a special agent for the Kansas City office of the U.S. Department of Justice's Bureau of Narcotics and Dangerous Drugs. The alleged transaction took place in LaMonte, where Diefenbach was living at the time.

Fleming said he recommended to Boone County Circuit Court Judge Frank Conley that Diefenbach be sentenced to five years in the state penitentiary and that he not be placed on probation.

Fleming also said he would dismiss another felony drug charge against Diefenbach in Pettis County Circuit Court. The charge alleges that Diefenbach was in unlawful possession of 13 amphetimine pills when arrested on April 26, 1971. Fleming said the dismissal was a "result of negotiations (with Diefenbach's attorney) regarding both cases."

Deifenbach's latter charge was transferred to Boone County on a change of venue.

Women opposed to ERA in 'bread' protest

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — A dozen St. Louis area women opposing ratification of the Equal Rights Amendment to the U.S. Constitution handed out 230 loaves of bread and "Stop ERA" buttons today to Missouri legislators.

The homemade brea bore the label, "Baking the bread or earning the bread, women do not need ERA."

Ratification was defeated here last year. New resolutions have been introduced in both houses but no hearing has been held. Thirty-two of the necessary 38 states have approved the amendment.

Elaine Middendorf, public relations chief for the "Missouri Stop ERA" group, said she was "opposed to giving power to the federal government" to enforce equal rights for men and women.

The proposed amendment says persons cannot be discriminated against because of sex and says Congress shall enforce the act.

Donna Hearne, chairman of the bread drive, said Missouri laws requiring a husband to support his wife and children would have to be changed.

"Beard was chosen as the vehicle for our project because bread has historically represented life and women opposed to ERA see this as a life and death issue concerning their feminity, their status as mothers and wives, and their rights already earned as working women," Mrs. Hearne said.

Ann McGraw, state chairman of Stop ERA, said the organization collected over 15,000 signatures on anti-ERA petitions. Also represented at the breadgiving was the Missouri Committee for the Protection of Women and Children.

Firemen retain lawyer to study residency issue

Attorney James Buckley confirmed Tuesday that he has been hired by city Firefighters' Local 823 to investigate the legality of the city's residency requirement.

"I plan to review the whole thing," Buckley said. He added that he has not begun research on the problem and did not know when he would report back to the Local.

Local 823 was scheduled to discuss the residency issue at its monthly meeting Monday night. However, Local president Robert Vogler Tuesday declined to comment on the meeting. The meeting was closed to the public.

The residency controversy stemmed from an incident in which a fireman, Robert Stevenson, Route 6, claimed he resided in the city at the time he applied for work with the fire department. After being accepted, he moved to the Maplewood subdivision in early 1973.

After learning of the incident, the city council in March approved an ordinance requiring all city employes, except those working at the public library, water department or Bothwell Hospital, to be city residents.

$50,000 damages awarded by judge

A Jefferson City couple was awarded $50,000 in damages Friday in Pettis County Circuit Court.

The suit, filed Aug. 16, 1972, by Wanda and Ray Larsen, named Mar-Mart Inc. as the defendant.

Mrs. Larsen contended that she was injujed Aug. 25, 1971, at the amusement slide at the Missouri State Fairgrounds. The slide was operated by Mar-Mart Inc. at the time.

According to the petition, an employe of Mar-Mart pushed her down the slide and she "became airborne and came down on her tailbone."

Mrs. Larsen had sought $50,000 in actual damages and $50,000 in punitive damaged. Her husband asked for $10,000.

Friday Judge Frank Meyer declared that Mrs. Larsen received $40,000, her husband $10,000.

Hearing in murder case is postponed

The preliminary hearing for Charles "Chuck" Brown, 53, 417 East St. Louis, charged with first degree murder, has been continued to 11 a.m. Feb. 11 at the request of Brown's attorney.

Brown is charged in connection with the Jan. 22 shooting death of Richard Keith Boggs, 20, 108 East Cooper. Boggs was shot twice, once through the heart, with a .30 caliber M-1 carbine at Brown's home.

James Buckley, Brown's attorney, requested the continuance to "secure a witness," Magistrate Court Judge Hazel Palmer said.

Brown was arraigned in Magistrate Court Thursday, when the hearing date was originally set for today.

Cambodia fighting has slowed

PHNOM PENH, Cambodia (AP) — Fighting slowed today on Phnom Penh's southern front as bogged-down government task forces waited for artillery and air strikes to take effect.

The Phnom Penh command reported clashes at two points near Route 38 at Prek Roteang, nine miles south of the capital. One government force is trying to push insurgent infiltrators back across the Prek Thnot River while the second is trying to hit the eastern flank of the Khmer Rouge.

Government infantry and armor failed Monday to clear an area about seven miles southwest of the capital, and field reports said 30 government soldiers were killed.

Insurgent gunners fired several more 105mm artillery rounds at Phnom Penh today, but military sources said they were two miles short of the city. The sources said the shells burned several houses on a coconut plantation, but it was not known if there were any casualties.

The Khmer Rouge have shelled Phnom Penh almost daily since Dec. 23, killing 152 persons and wounding at least 373.

Meanwhile, 350 monks of Cambodia's largest Buddhist sect announced an indefinite hunger strike to protest the "immeasurable sufferings" of innocent people caught in the war.

The Moha Nikay sect said it is neutral in the war but wants both sides to stop the destruction of religious property and attacks on civilians and monks. The sect has more than 6,000 monks.

In Vietnam, heavy fighting was reported before dawn. The Saigon command reported 72 North Vietnamese and Viet Cong and 10 South Vietnamese were killed in battles northwest and southwest of Saigon.

The four members of the International Commission of Control and Supervision flew to Hanoi today for their first visit to North Vietnam since the cease-fire agreement was signed one year ago.

The group was to visit sites in the Hanoi area and meet with officials of North Vietnam's Foreign Ministry during the three-day visit.

A spokesman for the American Friends Service Committee reported that three workers for the Quakers' group are missing and presumed held by the Viet Cong. Committee headquarters in Philadelphia said the three had gone to the My Lai Rehabilitation camp near Quang Ngai to visit refugees.

Man pleads guilty in assault case

Ivin Farrow, 38, 715 West Seventh, pleaded guilty in Pettis County Circuit Court Tuesday morning to a charge of assault with intent to rob, according to Prosecuting Attorney Gary Fleming.

Sentencing was delayed until March 18 pending a pre-sentence investigation by the State Board of Probation and Parole.

Farrow is charged with assaulting Mrs. Delores Stockstill with a knife Sept. 4 at the Pacific Cafe, 202 West Main. He allegedly threatened to injure her and rob her husband, Charles Stockstill, owner of the cafe.

In Magistrate Court action Tuesday, two preliminary hearings were continued. The hearing for Charles Smith, 33, Route 4, charged with issuing a forged check, was continued indefinitely. The hearing for Hazel Priesmeyer, 25, 309 North Grand, charged with stealing merchandise valued at more than $50, was tentatively set for 3 p.m. Wednesday.

Astronauts will leave 'time capsule'

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — When the Skylab 3 astronauts depart their orbiting home next week, they'll leave behind a "time capsule" that may be retrieved by future spacemen.

On Monday, mission control radioed the astronauts a list of 30 items to be placed in a bag and left in a convenient spot inside the laboratory.

Gerald P. Carr, William R. Pogue and Edward G. Gibson today were in the 75th day of their 84-day mission, heading for a Feb. 8 return to earth. They are the third and final crew to inhabit the 85-ton space station.

There presently is no plan to revisit Skylab, but officials are discussing the possibility of having a three-man U.S. astronaut team inspect it briefly during a joint Soviet-American flight in July 1975.

Capsule communicator Richard Truly told the Skylab 3 crew Monday, "We're going to have you put together what we call a revisit bag which could be retrieved by any future crew to bring home so we could look at how the items have survived.

"It will be Skylab's own little time capsule."

Among the contents will be five food and beverage items, unused film, camera filters, clothing, electric cables, flight plan pages and small electronic devices.

Experts estimate the Skylab vehicle will stay aloft for 10 or 11 years before the tug of gravity finally pulls the 85-ton station into earth's atmosphere, where friction will burn it up.

Trial delay sought in mass murders

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP) — A defense attorney says he will question reporters on the sources of their stories at a pretrial hearing for Elmer Wayne Henley, accused in the Texas mass slayings.

Testimony is to begin today on a motion by lawyer Will Gray to delay Henley's trial for six months to let publicity die down.

Gray has subpoenaed more than 60 newsmen and the stories they wrote to back up his claim that prejudicial publicity based on police leaks about the case has made a delay necessary.

"We'll also be filing a motion to quash the whole murder indictment because of the publicity generated by these law officers," Gray said. "Some of the evidence we will develop at the continuance hearing will apply to the motion to quash, especially the news sources."

Gray said on Monday he will ask each reporter where he obtained a statement by a second defendant in the case, David Owen Brooks, 18. The statement Brooks made to police accuses Henley, 17, of killing several of the 27 young victims, who died over a three-year period.

Lawyers for two newspapers appeared Monday and asked State District Judge William Hatten for a protective order stopping Gray from inquiring about news sources. But Hatten told them, "I don't see how I can make the decision in advance until the materiality of the question comes up."

Gray said he doesn't believe his client can get a fair trial in Texas at this time, but "deserves a trial, if possible, before his peers here."

The attorney said he may support moving the trial away from Houston at a later date but believes the proceeding must be put off in any case.

Henley is accused in six of the 27 slayings. He will be tried first in the slaying of Charles Cobble, 17, a boyhood friend police say Henley lured to his death in the homosexual murder and torture ring.

Brooks, due for trial after Henley, is accused in four slayings.

Waste water is seminar's topic

Twenty-six waste water treatment plant workers from 17 west-central Missouri cities Tuesday attended an instruction seminar in the Municipal Building here.

The session, the first of five to be held monthly through May, was funded by the federal Environmental Quality Commission and sponsored by the Missouri Clean Water Commission. Harry Becker, Jefferson City, a training inspector for the commission, conducted the session.

Future sessions, Becker told The Democrat-Capital, will concern maintenance procedures and laboratory analysis of water samples.

Local waste treatment employes attending the meeting were Raymond Schultz, Paul Long, Robert Paul, Dennis Vinson, Melvin Hotson and Alfred Pummill.

Others attending were from California, Cole Camp, Lincoln, LaMonte, Pilot Grove, Stover, Tipton, Versailles, Warsaw, Windsor, Salisbury, Huntsville, Holden, Emma, Kingsville and Harrisonville.

Complementing the instruction seminars in future months, Becker said, will be on-the-job training in which he will work directly with the waste water treatment facility employes in the participating cities.

Voting deadline announced here

The Pettis County University of Missouri Extension Council Tuesday reminded county residents that ballots for Extension council positions must be postmarked no later than Thursday. The ballots were mailed to county residents Jan. 15.

Those who have not received a ballot may still obtain one from the Extension Center in the federal building.

Woman enters race for council position

Mrs. Betty L. Tagtmeyer, 2616 Anderson, became the first woman this year to file for a council position Monday when she filed for the Fourth Ward seat currently held by Democrat Lee Garrison, 2211 South Missouri.

Mrs. Tagtmeyer, a Republican, is the fourth person to file for Garrison 's seat. Garrison earlier filed for re-election, along with Democrat Ben Pummill, 2601 Clarendon Drive and Republican Robert Eidson, 2601 South Stewart.

Mrs. Tagtmeyer said, "I thought its time a woman has a voice at the city level. ' '

"I feel like I can do a good job and devote a lot of time to research and preparation. ' '

Mrs. Tagtmeyer said she could devote quite a bit of time to the position if elected because she is not employed.

She said two of the goals she will work for if elected are serving a full-time mayor and an economic development representative.

Mrs. Tagtmeyer said this is her first time in seeking an elective office, although she has been active in campaigning for Republican candidates in the past.

Mrs. Tagtmeyer moved to Sedalia from San Francisco four years ago because she wanted to bring her children up in a small Midwestern town, she said.

February filing for school board

Anyone wishing to file for seats on the Sedalia school board must do so at the Board of Education Building, Fourth and Moniteau. The terms of two members, George Thompson and Mrs. Jane Dugan, expire April 2.

Thompson, a candidate for mayor, will not seek re-election. Canadidates may file during regular office hours, 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Monday through Friday during February.

To qualify, candidates must be U.S. citizens, resident taxpayers of Sedalia School District 200, and residents of Missouri for one year before the election. They must also be at least 30 years old.

The school board consists of six members serving three-year terms.

FBI joins in search for three-year-old

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — The Federal Bureau of Investigation today joined the search for a missng 3-year-old boy, saying federal investigators would work on the premise that the child has been abducted.

The child, Matthew Alred, was last seen Sunday evening when he was playing in the backyard of his suburban home with two older brothers and a 12-year-old sister.

"It's like the earth swallowed him up," a relative said today as weary searchers combed palmetto fields and woodlands without trace of the youngster.

"We've walked and walked and we're still walking," said Louise Hart, an aunt. "There's been no sign of him. He's so little, it's hard to take."

For the third straight day, hundreds of searchers, many on horseback, hunted for the missing boy.

"They're still out there looking for him," a spokesman for the Hillsborough County Sheriff's Office said early today. "We have about 250 people combing the fields and checking the ponds."

The child was described as slender, 3-foot-3 and blond. He was wearing blue cut-off jeans, a white teeshirt and suede cowboy boots.

"This is the first time the child has been out of the yard alone," said the boy's mother, Virginia Alred.

She remained at her ClairMel City home, a suburb of Tampa on Florida's west coast, while her husband joined the search.

"I feel that everything that can be done is being done," said Vernon Alred, a truck driver.

Estimate trade increased jobs by 1.5 million

WASHINGTON (AP) — If government estimates are correct, an increase in U.S. trade last year created 1.5 million jobs.

The Commerce Department reported Monday that the United States had a surplus in its foreign trade in 1973 of $1.7 billion, the first trade surplus in three years.

Exports totaled $70.8 billion, a 44 per cent increase over 1972. The Commerce Department said nearly half this gain was in agricultural exports.

Imports totaled $69 billion, a 24 per cent increase over 1972, and the cost of petroleum imports were up by $3.4 billion over the previous year.

The government estimates that each $1 billion in U.S. export trade leads to 72,000 new jobs, which would mean an increase in employment last year by 1.5 million.

Sidney L. Jones, assistant secretary of Commerce for economic affairs, said the biggest factors in the improved U.S. trade position were the two devaluations of the dollar. These made U.S. goods cheaper overseas and foreign goods more expensive in this country.

Jones said the trade surplus of $1.7 billion was about double what the government had expected. The United States had deficits of $6.4 billion in 1972 and $2 billion in 1971.

But Jones said the U.S. trade surplus may be short-lived. He said the higher cost of world oil probably would offset other U.S. trade gains and lead to renewed deficits in 1974.

In addition to reporting the 1973 trade surplus, the Commerce Department also said Monday that the United States had a record monthly trade surplus of $942 million in December.

The previous single monthly record was $878 million in March of 1965.

'Voice-over' specialist has long list of credits

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Alexander Scourby set out in the 1930s to be an actor. He still is one. But odds are you'll hear his voice more often on television than you'll actually see him.

He's one of New York's leading men, so to speak, in the specialized field of off-camera voice-overs for commercials, his major accounts this year being Exedrin and Chevrolet.

He's also done the narration for so many radio and television documentaries over the past 30 years he doesn't even want to guess approximately how many he's done.

"I think it's probably in the hundreds, but I don't really know," laughed Scourby, whose latest narrative effort, a documentary called "The Battle for Dominance," airs Thursday night on ABC-TV.

It's one of television's many ironies that with all his credits, he's often remembered as the man who narrated NBC's superb "Victory At Sea" documentary series in the 1950s.

But Leonard Graves did all the narration for the weekly, half-hour series. Scourby only narrated what he calls "the boiled-down version," which NBC aired as a 90-minute special.

"I never had anything to do with the series and I think it's a great injustice to the poor guy who did it if I get the credit," he said. "He (Graves) did a very good job."

Scourby, who has a mellow, resonant voice and casually precise diction that sounds vaguely British at times, hails from a Brooklyn, a hamlet not exactly known for kindness to the English language.

"I don't think I ever had a Brooklyn accent," he insists. "An awful lot of people are born in Brooklyn and don't have a Brooklyn accent.

If there was any Flatbush in his speech, his acting classes not only removed it, but, as he observes, "we came out with speech so pure that we had to 'dirty it up' for radio."

How long does it take to narrate a TV documentary? Scourby says it varies with the efficiency of the producer and scriptwriter. True woe is when the written narration runs longer than the film.

"Then you've got to spend half a day boiling it down, making cuts, and usually they've written it so compactly that you can't hardly do anything," he said.

His idea of narrative heaven is first watching the film footage, then marking spots in the script for inflections and pauses and then sitting down at the microphone.

"That way," he said, "you get continuity, a real feeling of telling a story. If it's a stop-go, stop-go, you break the flow."

Welfare eligibility headache

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — A plan to verify welfare eligibility by having recipients personally pick up next month's checks has become a headache for officials and a rallying point for welfare rightists.

Early this month, State Welfare Commissioner Fred Friend announced plans for eligibility checks of Tennessee's 191,390 recipients of Aid to Families With Dependent Children (AFDC).

Since then, the Nashville Welfare Mothers has filed a class action suit in federal court seeking to block the plan, and a black state lawmaker filed a resolution in the legislature directing Friend to halt his "policy change." The suit is pending. The resolution failed to pass the House last week.

The Nashville chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People has called for Friend's resignation, and civic groups across the state have called the plan humiliating and unproductive.

Friend has defended his plan by saying the state must reduce AFDC overpayments in the next six months or risk the loss of $738,000 in matching federal funds. The plan is the only conceivable way to quickly weed out welfare roles, he said.

Under the plan, AFDC recipients would have to report in person to county welfare offices to validate their claims. State welfare officials say three types of proof must be presented — proof of residence, proof of identity and proof of the number of persons for whom claims are filed.

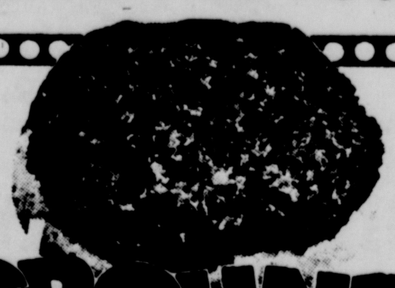

Black political leaders in Memphis, where some 20,000 AFDC recipients are to gather for the verification, first loudly opposed the idea, then saw it as a "golden political opportunity."

Jesse Epps, president of Memphis' National Tenants Union chapter, said black leaders have arranged with the election commission to have voter registration booths set up during the welfare check.

Interest forecast not good for potential homebuyers

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — If you're one of the many potential homebuyers who is waiting for interest rates to come down you'll be concerned with what the Federal Home Loan Bank Board has to say. It says you'll have a very long wait.

That forecast was contained in an overview of the industry in 1980, published in this months board Journal. The board is the regulatory agency for the nation's savings and loan associations, which write most home mortgages.

Offering his view of conditions in 1980, Harris Friedman, chief of economic research, wrote:

"... Interest rates will continue to reflect an inflation premium and the chances for the level of long-term interest rates to come down significantly are remote."

Aside from that gloomy prediction, the outlook for users of S&Ls looks pretty good, even exciting, and by all means reassuring. The unbalanced checkbook, for example, might finally be resolved.

Looking into "A day in the life of an S&L customer — 1980," another board official lists some of the services being offered.

The day begins with John Doe preparing to pay his bills. He reviews the monthly statement he has received from the 10th Federal S&L Association. As he had instructed his employer to do, his paychecks had been deposited in his account.

On the 10th of the month the association automatically withdrew his mortgage payment from his account, and had transferred some other funds to higher yielding savings accounts.

One of these, a long-term account paying 8 per cent will be used for retirements or college tuition. Another account, yielding only 6 per cent, will be used for the family's annual vacation.

He notes that the S&L received and paid his electric and gas bills during the month, an arrangement he accepted when the companies established a preplanned budget, enabling him to know in advance what each bill would be.

As he reviewed his statement, he noted that his wife had taken $250 for food purchases and other items during the month. She had accomplished this merely by offering a plastic card to the foodstore clerk, who then inserted it in a gadget hooked up with the S&L.

Make what you will of this additional service: "The clerk also could charge an extra amount so that his wife could receive some change for other shopping."

Reviewing his other regular expenses for the month, Doe simply totalled the bills, named the creditors in a standard form and mailed it to 10th Federal in a postage-paid envelope. Tenth Federal paid the bills.

"With first-class postage at 20 cents, he saved several dollars a month by letting his S&L handle his payments. Besides, he received a 4 per cent interest on his unused funds. In addition, the tiresome chore of balancing a checking account had been eliminated."

Doe also liked several other services offered by his S&L, especially the complete preparation of his income tax return. "He felt he was getting bigger refunds, and certainly a lot sooner with the S&L preparing it."

In the same mail with the income tax return came a suggested budget for his family, which Doe immediately violated because of the enticement of still another service: easy money from a dispenser.

As he was leaving the office, Doe withdrew $50 from his account by inserting his plastic card in the cash dispenser. "Every office building in town, incidentally, had such a cash dispenser in 1980."

WORLD ALMANAC FACTS

According th U.S. Geological Survey hydrologists, man is presently able to utilize not more than one per cent of the world's total supply of water, The World Almanac notes. Most of the world's water — the estimate is more than 97 per cent — is in the oceans and therefore salty. About 2 per cent of the water is locked up in the ice caps of Greenland and Antarctica.

Art Buchwald

The emotional toll of high profits

WASHINGTON — "Doctor, my name is Charles Dividend, and I am president of the Windfall Oil Co. of New Jersey."

Buchwald

"Yes, I was expecting you. You told your regular doctor you wanted to see a psychiatrist. Would you care to sit in a chair or lie down on the couch?"

"I'll lie down on the couch."

"What seems to be the problem, Mr. Dividend?"

"People are saying terrible things about me. Everywhere I go they call me names like profiteer and price gouger and Mr. Ripoff. I can't take it any more, Doctor."

"When did this paranoia start?"

"It's not paranoia! I was up in front of a Senate committee last week and they treated me like a criminal. I'm president of one of the largest oil companies in the world. I personally gave $100,000 to Nixon's campaign. I'm a great American and I think I should be treated with a little respect."

"I see. Would you like a Kleenex?

"No, thank you. Everyone is mad at me because I wouldn't sell any oil to the U.S. Navy during the Arab embargo. But what would you do, Doctor, if the king of Saudi Arabia said you couldn't give any oil to the United States. After all, he's a king."

"You sound as if you're carrying around a certain amount of guilt, Mr. Dividend."

"I have nothing to be guilty about, Doctor. I've done a damn good job. My company has provided cheap and abundant energy through aggressive competition. We have spawned tremendous economic growth in this country and have made America the greatest country in the Free World."

"Then why do you need a psychiatrist?"

"I can't remember anything."

"Could you be a little more specific?"

"Well, the other day I went up on The Hill to testify before a congressional committee. They asked me how much profit we had made during the energy crisis and I couldn't for the life of me come up with the figure. Then they asked me how much we had paid out to our stockholders and my mind went blank. They also wanted to know how much taxes we had contributed to the United States, and I just stared at them."

"It seems to me, Mr. Dividend, that you appear to have a block about profits."

"I never did in the past, Doctor. Before the energy crisis I could reel off every figure in our annual company report by heart. Now I can't even remember how much oil we're refining in a month."

"Amnesia is not unusual in the oil business, Mr. Dividend."

"That's easy for you to say, Doctor. But how would you like it if 200 million people thought you were cashing in on a crisis, when, in fact, all you're trying to do is get a decent return on your capital?"

"You feel that there are 200 million people in this country talking behind your back?"

"I KNOW it, Doctor. When I walk down the street, people start chanting, 'Windfall, Windfall, hey, hey,hey, — How much did you raise our gas today?' "

"Perhaps they're jealous because you have a depletion allowance and they don't. Mr. Dividend, you can't be an oil baron and also expect to be loved."

"I can't?"

"Well, actually, it's too early to say. I think we have to have a few more sessions before we come to any definite conclusions. What about coming in on Tuesday at 3 o'clock?"

"Thank you, Doctor, you've been a big help to me. How much do I owe you?"

"That will be $40 for the hour."

"Okay. Can you change a $1,000 bill?"

A conservative view

Credible press is need also

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK

WASHINGTON — For the past couple of years, the watchword around town has been "credibility." Sometimes it applied to federal agencies, sometimes to candidates for president; mostly it applied to the credibility of Mr. Nixon. But within the media, we very seldom have applied the watchword to us.

Kilpatrick

Credibility to the press is not exactly like chastity to a woman, for credibility, once lost, may perhaps be regained. But the analogy is not far wrong. And when we lose credibility, we lose virtue. It is an old-fashioned word. And when the Harris Survey tells us that only 30 per cent of the people have "a great deal of confidence" in the press, it may be time for journalists, once they have put their papers to bed, to do some sober thinking about credibility and virtue.

Toward that end, let us consider the village that wasn't, and the goodies that never got buried. There are morals here.

Last July 10, the Times of London carried a long article by a Catholic priest, Father Adrian Hastings, describing a massacre by Portuguese troops at the village of Wiriyamu, in Northern Mozambique. The piece ran to some 40 column inches. In grisly detail, the story chronicled the slaying of 400 natives on Dec. 16, 1972. It named names of victims. It fairly vibrated with vivid writing:

"One woman called Vaina was invited to stand up. She had her child in her arms, a boy of nine months. The woman fell dead with a bullet shot. The child fell with his mother and sat by her. He cried desperately, and a soldier advanced to stop his crying. He kicked the boy violently, destroying his head. 'Shut up, dog,' the soldier said."

The Times' story leaped the Atlantic. Both the New York Times and the Washington Post gave it substantial play. The article provided a fine mouth-watering tidbit for political parsons prepared to believe anything bad about the Portuguese. And there was but one trouble with the piece: There was scarcely a word of truth in it.

Within a month after the Times story appeared, the London Economist exposed the tale as so much Communist propaganda contrived by Czechoslovakian agents who had fed it to a pair of gullible Spanish priests. The priests fed it in turn to Father Hastings. He fed it to the Times. There was no such village as Wiriyamu, and no massacre. A Washington-based organization, Accuracy in Media, confirms the fabrication. So much for this one.

On Aug. 15, the Washington Post carried a long story by reporter William Clairborne, having to do with the literal burial of valuable military goods at the Air Force base in Charleston, S.C. The article began on page one and jumped for more than a column inside. The substance of the piece was that in an effort to deceive Air Force inspectors, certain officers at Charleston had ordered great quantities of electrical equipment, steel cable, even desks and chairs, buried in a pond and a dump.

The article added its bit to the collected horror stories of Pentagon waste. The Los Angeles Times, swallowing the story whole, asserted editorially that "punishment is in order." But, again, there was but one trouble: The reports were untrue. Air Force inspectors drained the pond and dug up the dump. They found nothing to support the Post's account. Robert Heinl of the Detroit News, one of Washington's finest reporters, has exposed the whole business.

In both cases, unless I am badly mistaken, the stories were published because writers and editors were subconsciously ready to believe rumors about unpopular institutions — the Portuguese in one instance, the military establishment in the other. Facts weren't sufficiently checked; and the stories appeared. The moral for my brothers of the press who worry about Mr. Nixon's credibility is found in Matthew 7. We truly ought to read the first five verses more often.

For the defense

Soviet Defense Minister Andrei Grechko has called for increased military spending by the Kremlin.

"As a whole, the conditions of the international situation demand that the Soviet people preserve high vigilance and tirelessly strengthen the defense capacity of the Soviet state," he said in a speech the other day which was probably directed as much for Western consumption as for Russian.

Change a couple of words and it could have been the U.S. secretary of defense testifying before a congressional committee.

Throughout history, men have always armed themselves for defense, never for offense. Even Hitler launched World War II in "defense" of Germany's national interests. Ditto for Japan. "Peace is our profession" is the motto of the Strategic Air Command.

The funny thing is that if the nations of the world really needed armies and bombers and missiles just for defense, then no nation would need any armies or bombers or missiles at all.

The trouble is that what is legitimate "defense" to one country is threatening "offense" in the eyes of its distrustful neighbor. That has been the problem of the ages, the solution to which continues to elude the peacemakers even as the weapons of "defense" become more and more truly offensive to mankind. (NEA)

Big Capitol thirst

The press has turned the spotlight on a time-honored tradition in Jefferson City, namely the practice of lobbyists keeping legislators well-stocked with free beer and liquor.

Lobbyists for the Missouri brewing industry report that it takes between 300 and 600 cases of free beer per legislative session to keep the lawmakers supplied. Each Friday state employes go about their appointed rounds in the Capitol filling office coolers.

Always eager to please, special interest groups can also be counted on in a pinch. This was illustrated during the recent snow storm, when Senate President Pro Tem William Cason had only to snap his fingers and various lobbyists came up with a sumptuous free banquet in the Capitol so the lawmakers wouldn't have to venture outside.

Both lobbyists and legislators deny that such favors influence votes. That's something the public will find a lot harder to swallow than the free food and booze our legislators are so adept at putting away.

IRS's tax probe of Nixon sloppy

By JACK ANDERSON

WASHINGTON — The Internal Revenue Service muffed the investigations last year into President Nixon's controversial 1970 and 1971 tax returns, according to inside sources.

The tax agents tried to run down our story that a secret, $100,000 cash gift from billionaire Howard Hughes had been delivered to Bebe Rebozo for the President.

Yet the agents never bothered to look at the President's bank records, which were kept in a special vault at Rebozo's Key Biscayne Bank.

Rebozo has sworn that the $100,000 gathered dust in a safety deposit box. Yet the agents made no real effort to check who had access to the box, whether money was removed and to whom it was distributed.

Rebozo also collected cash from other fatcats in Nixon's behalf. Yet the agents made no attempt to run down who contributed, how much they coughed up and what happened to the money.

Nor did the agents challenge at $576,000 tax deduction, which Nixon claimed for donating his vice presidential papers to the government. Yet the President's appraiser didn't even select which papers should be donated until four months after the July 25, 1969, deadline had passed for claiming such deductions. The deed, giving the government title to the papers, was also backdated.

The President paid such low taxes — $792.81 in 1971 and $873.02 in 1972 on an income that averaged more than $280,000 a year — that the computers automatically targeted his returns for audit.

Most of his income, including his presidential salary checks, were routed to his tax attorney, Frank DeMarco, in California. Then DeMarco would relay them back across the country to Rebozo's bank.

In May of 1973, the agents spent less than eight hours with DeMarco going over the President's books. They found the paperwork in order.

About the same time, they traced the $100,000 gift from the Silver Slipper, one of Howard Hughes' Nevada gambling houses, to Rebozo. It was delivered by Hughes aide Richard Danner.

A few days later, the superficial Internal Revenue investigation fizzled out. On June 1, IRS district director William Walters wrote the President: "Our examination of your income tax returns for the years 1971 and 1972 revealed that they are correct . . . . I want to compliment you on the care shown in the preparation of your returns."

But like so many other statements concerning the President, this, too, has turned out to be inoperative. Tax agents are now back investigating the President's returns again for evidence of possible fraud and tax evasion.

ADVERTISING VS. RESEARCH: As evidence that the oil industry puts today's profits ahead of tomorrow's needs, the major oil companies spent nearly as much money in the early 1970s on advertising as on research.

This is the confidential report of government auditors who investigated the comparative spending of seven companies in 1970, 1971 and 1972. Their study doesn't even take into account, therefore, the media saturation campaign undertaken by the companies in 1973 to counteract the bad publicity over the oil crisis.

Their ,preliminary findings are summarized in a General Accounting Office report, which reveals that the seven companies kept their research spending at stable levels, while their advertising budgets climbed steadily.

Yet research is vital to overcome the critical oil shortage. An economical method is urgently needed, for example, to recover oil from abandoned fields. In some abandoned wells, an expert told us, 60 per cent of the oil remains in the ground.

More attention to research also might have developed a practical way to extract the trillions of gallons of oil, which is locked in the shale and coal formations of the West.

Here are highlights from the GAO study:

✔ Gulf Oil spent $18 million on advertising in 1970, only $12 million for research.

✔ Exxon slashed its research budget by $2 million in 1971, while increasing its advertising budget an estimated $5 million. Exxon provided no information on its 1972 research spending, although it proclaims on TV: "We want you to know." Apparently, they don't want us to know too much.

✔ Standard of Indiana spent the same amount in 1970 on advertising and research — $28 million each. But in 1972, the company raised research spending to $33 million and cut back advertising to $26 million.

✔ Standard of California spent $44 million on research in 1971 but withheld the advertising budget from the government auditors. Reversely, Mobil Oil reported a $23.5 million advertising budget in 1972 but refused to divulge the research spending.

We don't really recommend that you, our readers, rush to play the Flannery convention. It does complicate bidding but if you have a partner who will play the convention you can have a lot of fun and some mighty good results with it.

The opening bid of two diamonds shows five hearts, four spades and 12-16 high-card points. Thus a Flannery two-diamond opening is a picture bid and with many hands responder can place the contract.

Today's hand is a good example. South knows that his partner holds nine cards in the major suits. That leaves him with just four cards in the minors so that if all North's high cards are in the majors he must have the ace of spades and ace-king of hearts so four spades will be a good contract. There is no slam and no need to shilly-shally. South bids the spade game.

Since spades break 3-2 and hearts 4-2 this spade contract wheels in. South wins the diamond lead, draws trumps; goes after hearts and makes only four since he must use his last trump to ruff one of dummy's hearts. There is nothing remarkable about getting to this game, but we can assure you that it would not be reached at over a quarter of the tables in a strong duplicate game.

It's Ali on unanimous decision; wants rematch with Frazier

NEW YORK (AP) — "Ali! Ali! Ali!"

The yells of the crowd rolled around the rafters of Madison Square Garden and played a song for the ears of proud Muhammad Ali.

Dancing, jabbing, playing a deadly tune on the profile of Joe Frazier like a ring Paderewski, the quick-fisted descendant of a Kentucky slave avenged an earlier defeat at the hands of the one-time world champion and fought his way back near the pinnacle of the sport.

Unanimous winner in a 12-round slugfest that brought a crowd of 20,748 to its feet and thrilled the millions of Ali supporters throughout the world, Muhammad stood out today as the No. 1 threat to the heavyweight crown held by big George Foreman.

"George Foreman is a sissy fighter," Ali said, tauntingly. "He fights like a girl. Joe Frazier is a good fighter. This was a great event.

"I think we should fight again."

This is a matter that is to be decided by the men in the back room — the lawyers, the managers, the auditors.

But one thing is certain. Heavyweight boxing is alive again, because Ali is back in full cry.

Foreman, who slugged Frazier to the canvas six times and won the heavyweight crown in a second-round knockout a year ago in Jamaica, will meet Ken Norton, who broke Ali's jaw and split two decisions with Muhammad, in a title defense at Caracas, Venezuela, March 26.

Bob Arum, who is Ali's lawyer and head of the agency that handled the world-wide television rights to Monday night's fight, would like to match Ali and the Foreman-Norton winner in the spring.

Normally, Ali, because of the heavy income tax bite, would be better off to postpone such a fight until next year. But Ali will be 33 then, going on 34, older, slower and less sharp.

A "rubber meeting" between the plodding, aggressive Frazier and the nimble-footed, sniping Ali conceivably could be an alternative.

"I want him again — you better believe it," Frazier, a gracious loser said after the fight. "One more time.

"I think I won, but it could have gone either way. I hurt him more than he hurt me. He was wrestling and holding on."

Ali, a bombastic, bragging challenger, was a chastened winner.

"I'm not gonna duck Joe," he said. "I'm not gonna be like Foreman. I thought Joe was finished. He surprised me. He was much better than in the first fight.

"I think he deserves another chance. This fight can't be topped by any other fight."

No one in the packed arena and perhaps no one in the vast unseen audience around the world appeared disinclined to dispute it.

It was another great fight between two different types of fighter — the slugger against the master craftsman — but it had a different ending. In the first fight, March 8, 1971, when the two were unbeaten champions, Frazier was the unanimous 15-round winner.

In Monday night's 12-rounder, the two judges gave Ali a wide edge; Tony Castellano 7-4-1 and Jack Gordon 8-4, while Tony Perez scored it 6-5-1, all for Ali.

A random poll of writers at ringside had it 18-4 for Ali, with one even.

Ali, 32, came out dancing and flicking that long left of his like a serpent's tongue. Frazier, 30, bearded, grunting and snorting like an angry bear, came out flailing away, disdaining any punches thrown his way.

Ali, 212, took the first two rounds handily, beating a tattoo on Frazier's angry face.

"I'm gonna get you," snarled Frazier in the third. It was a round he won, twice jarring Ali's head back with vicious left hooks and pounding telling blows into Muhammad's midsection.

Ali continued weaving, darting, poking. They seemed to be harmless shots but they landed flush on Frazier's glowering face and they began to take effect.

Ali appeared to win the fourth, fifth and sixth rounds. He was an evasive target. Frazier, 209, swung wildly, connected occasionally, missed often.

In the sixth round, a lip reader could see Frazier snort, "I'm gonna get you." Before he would get the words out, Ali shot a blood red glove flush to his snarling mouth.

Frazier, obviously irked at his failure to drive home a telling or a knockout blow in the early rounds, picked up momentum in the seventh. He danced and taunted Ali, nailed Muhammad with thunderous left hooks.

Frazier fought well in the seventh and eighth, maybe winning both, as Ali showed signs of tiring. Ali became flat-footed. He moved with less agilty. He took more punishment and administered less.

In the ninth round, Frazier grinned at Ali and motioned to him, "Come on, let's fight."

Swinging wildly, never giving ground, he brought blood to Ali's nose. He spit some blood from his mouth himself. But Ali hung on, tying him up and pecking away at his foe like a gifted swordsman.

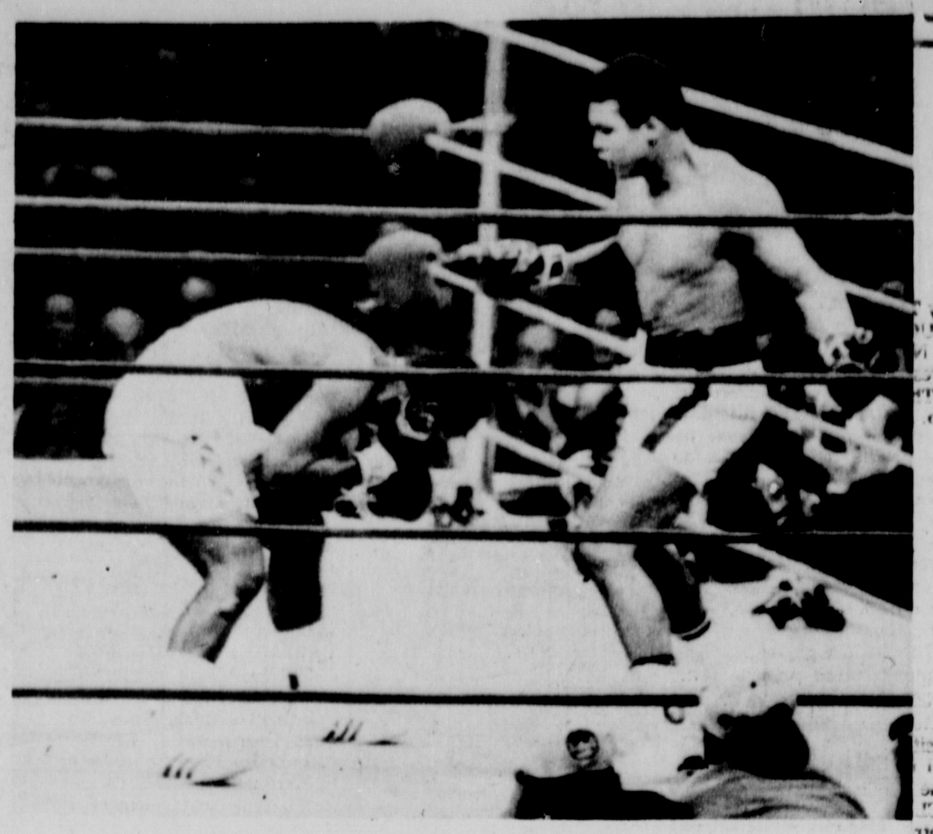

Frazier remained the aggressor. He kept coming forward like an angry bull. He snorted. He puffed. He swung. Ali jabbed, poked, stung his man.

"Float like a butterfly, sting like a bee."

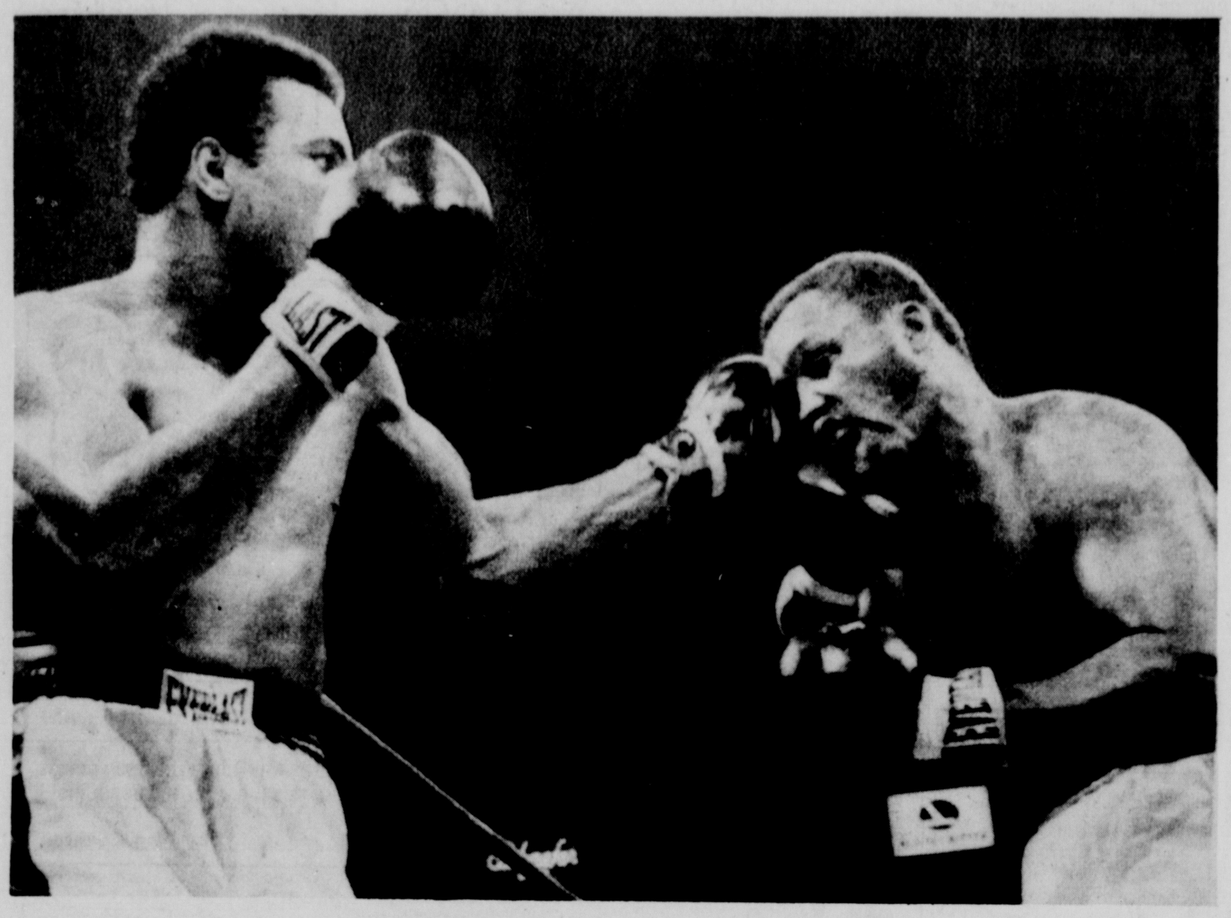

The old Ali adage of strategy was never practiced more skillfully.

Then it was over — Ali by a unanimous decision.

It was a long road back for Ali, who had his crown snatched from him and who was widely abused for his failure to accept the draft and go into the Vietnamese war.

SFCC plays for consolation

Forest Park handles State Fair in tourney

(Democrat-Capital Service)

NEOSHO, Mo. — Forest Park Community College of St. Louis eliminated State Fair Community College from the championship bracket of the Crowder Classic here Monday night, halting the Roadrunners' hopes for a repeat championship in the annual event.

The Highlanders broke the game open late in the first half and breezed to a 75-58 victory, making the second time in as many meetings that Forest Park has handled SFCC. Two weeks ago, the Highlanders handed State Fair one of the Roadrunners' worst setbacks of the season at 83-54.

"We just played poor, that's all there is to it," said State Fair coach Bill Barton, who saw his team's record dip to 10-11 with the loss. "It was one of our poorest efforts of the season," he added.

Barton went on to say, "I don't know what it is about Forest Park that makes us play so poorly . . . we had trouble scoring against them two weeks ago in St. Louis, and the same was true here in the tournament."

Asked if he felt his team might have had any let-down from Saturday night's big victory over Moberly Area Junior College, Barton replied, "there had to be a little letdown, but it looked like we were ready to play just before the game."

The win for Forest Park put the Highlanders in Tuesday night's championship game against Seminole, Okla., which ousted host Crowder 75-63 in Monday's other game.

State Fair is scheduled to meet Crowder in tonight's 7 p.m. consolation contest.

"This one tonight is a big one for us," Barton pointed out. "We need a win in order to get any break in the pairings in the regional next month," he added.

Highlander forward Steve Cooks and guard Tom Rothschild combined for 41 of Forest Park's points. Cooks, hitting many of his from long range, led the attack with 23. Following Rothschild's 18, was Don Stringfellow, who pumped in 15.

Jack Easley, SFCC's sophomore guard from Kansas City, was high for the losers with 21. Charles Shell, who was held to only one point in the first half, followed with 13.

After tonight's game with host Crowder, the Roadrunners will return to the Ag Building on the Missouri State Fairgrounds for another meeting with Crowder Friday at 8 p.m.

Dallas picks Ed 'Too Tall' Jones

Tennessee State defensive end selected first in football draft

NEW YORK (AP) — As expected, the Dallas Cowboys opened the National Football League draft Tuesday by selecting Ed "Too Tall' Jones, a 6-foot-9, 264-pound defensive end from Tennessee State.

It was the first time Dallas ever had the overall No. 1 pick. They acquired it from the Houston Oilers in a trade for Tody Smith and Billy Parks.

Jones, who has run 40 yards in 4.7 seconds and whose coach, John Merritt, calls him "a whole pass defense by himself," appeared in the postseason Senior Bowl, East-West Shrine Game and the Blue-Gray Game.

Choosing second, the San Diego Chargers took Bo Matthews, a 228-pound fullback from Colorado.

The New York Giants then chose 258-pound offensive tackle John Hicks of Ohio State, a two-time All-American.

The Chicago Bears, who may have to move ace linebacker Dick Butkus to center because of bad knees, selected linebacker Waymond Bryant of Tennessee State, a teammate of Jones.

The Baltimore Colts then tapped All-American John Dutton, a 255-pound defensive tackle from Nebraska.

Fred Schubach, a player personnel official official for the Colts, said Baltimore was "surprised" Dutton was available when their turn came. He added, "We don't know how much trouble we might have getting him away from the Florida franchise of the WFL. We'll just have to see."

Dutton was taken on the third round of the WFL draft.

The New York Jets then chose Carl Barzilauskas, a 266-pound defensive tackle from Indiana.

The St. Louis Cardinals used up 14½ minutes of their allotted time and finally went for tight end J.V. Cain of Colorado, the second player drafted from that school. The 226-pound Cain has 4.6 speed and caught 23 passes for 293 yards last season.

In the first deal the Lions' No. 1 pick and offensive lineman Dave Thompson, a three-year pro from Clemson. That dropped New Orleans' first pick from eighth to 13th.

The Lions utilized the pick acquired from New Orleans and chose Penn State linebacker Ed O'Neil, who went ahead of his more celebrated teammate, Heisman trophy winner John Cappelletti.

The San Francisco 49ers, using a pick acquired from New England two years ago for tight end Bob Windsor, selected Wilbur Jackson, Alabama's ace running back. Jackson averaged 7.9 yards a carry last season.

The clock actually ran out before the 49ers announced their pick but it was immaterial since San Francisco also had the next choice, which was their own.

The 49ers used less than three minutes on their second pick of the opening round and tapped Bill Sandifer, a 285-pound defensive tackle from UCLA.

The Los Angeles Rams, using a choice acquired from Philadelphia in the Roman Gabriel deal, selected Heisman winner Cappelletti from Penn State. He was the 11th player chosen by the NFL.

Cappelletti was the eighth player picked in last week's World Football League draft. He was taken by the Philadelphia franchise.

The Green Bay Packers used almost all the allotted time before tapping 235-pound fullback Barty Smith from the University of Richmond.

Three sign with WFL

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — On the eve of the National Football League's college player draft, the upstart World Football League has signed three prime prospects and says it wants the NFL to take note.

"This ought to shake them up in New York," WFL President Gary Davidson said Monday after the league's Southern California franchise came to terms with UCLA running backs James McAliter and Kermit Johnson and University of Southern California offensive tackle Booker Brown.

All three were expected to be picked high in today's NFL draft in New York.

Mike Trope, agent for the three who became the WFL's first announced players, said they signed with the new league before the NFL draft, "because the players were at the peak of their value when they signed Friday.

Trope, president of World Sports Management Inc., said McAliter and Johnson signed multiyear contracts worth about $750,000 together and "Both of them got exactly the same thing."

He said Brown got "more than $200,000," and added:

"In fact, as of right now, Booker Brown is the highest-paid lineman in the history of professional football."

Owner Larry Hatfield of the yet unnamed Southern California WFL team said the signings are a boost to the league's fight to exist.

Jr. High Gremlins lose first in loop

LINCOLN — Sacred Heart suffered its first loss in Kaysinger Conference junior high action here Monday night 50-21.

The junior high Gremlins carried a 6-0 record into the game.

Sacred Heart salvaged the girls volleyball contest in two straight 15-3, 15-8.

Tigers face must game

Six of the nine teams in the Kaysinger Conference have league dates scheduled tonight. One other team, Sedalia Sacred Heart, has a non-loop contest slated.

The highlight game finds Smithton, still smarting over last week's 43-40 loss to Cole Camp, in Stover.

Other action around the league features Northwest at Green Ridge, LaMonte at Lincoln, while Pilot Grove comes to Sacred Heart.

Smithton is a half-game back of league-leading Cole Camp, but could pull even with the Bluebirds with a victory.

Smithton rejoined the winning ranks Friday with an 87-52 romp over Green Ridge.

After getting off to a slow start losing their first six games of the season, the Stover Bulldogs have won eight of their last 11 games and could pull to the .500 level with a victory. Currently the Bulldogs, under first-year coach Gene Cotton, are 8-9.

On the other hand, Smithton can ill afford another loss, with Cole Camp in the league's driver's seat at 5-1.

A loss would virtually eliminate the Tigers, who were the pre-season pick.

Stover is faced with the same problem, alone in third place in the conference at 3-1.

Smithton and Stover opened their seasons in a non-conference battle at Smithton, a game that saw the Tigers slip past Stover 50-42.

Six other games are scheduled in the Kaysinger Conference this week. Wednesday, LaMonte plays host to Fatima (Westphalia); Friday, Stover travels to LaMonte, Smithton plays Sacred Heart in Sedalia, Leeton meets Cole Camp at Cole Camp, Green Ridge hosts Warsaw and Deepwater is at Lincoln.

Notre Dame falls to 3rd in AP poll

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

UCLA is back in its customary No. 1 spot in the Associated Press college basketball poll.

The Bruins, who fell into the No. 2 position for the first time in three years last week, reclaimed the top spot by a wide margin today in the wake of Saturday's convincing 94-75 victory over Notre Dame. UCLA, 15-1, picked up 51 of 52 first-place votes from a nationwide panel of sports writers and broadcasters, and piled up 1,038 total points.

The Irish, who snapped the Bruins' record 88-game win streak Jan. 19th with a 71-70 victory and took over the No. 1 position in the poll last week, fell to third this time around. One voter, unconvinced by UCLA's latest victory, gave Notre Dame the remaining first-place ballot.

North Carolina State, 13-1 after beating North Carolina and Purdue, moved up one spot to second. The Wolfpack collected 894 points, as compared to 864 points for the third-place Irish.

Wilt Chamberlain's famous 'reach' could be better utilized on the court than on the bench. But Wilt, now coach of the San Diego Conquistadors, must sit the season out after jumping from the NBA. A court ruled Chamberlain could coach, but couldn't play this season for the Q's. Chamberlain is shown in action in Monday night's loss to the Utah Stars in Salt Lake City. (UPI)

Commissioner says 'no'

Sale rumors persist at Memphis, Virginia

NORFOLK, Va (AP) — Reports and rumors persisted that either the Memphis or Virginia franchises — or both — would be sold during the American Basketball Association's break for the 1974 All-Star game, being played Wednesday night at Norfolk's Scope, but Commissioner Mike Storen insisted that neither club was up for discussion at Tuesday's Board of Trustees meeting.

Despite Storen's emphatic tone, however, owners Earl Foreman of Virginia and Charles Finley of Memphis have said publicly they expect to sell their franchises by Feb. 1.

Asked if such a sale didn't transpire on the effective date, Foreman said, "I have no comment on whether I will throw in the towel if I have not sold the franchise by Feb. 1."

Finley was not expected in Norfolk for the All-Star game. But his doctors have ordered him to divest himself of his sports interests because of his health. He suffered a heart attack last year.

Finley already has sold his National Hockey League Club, the California Golden Seals, and has been negotiating for the sale of his two-time World Series champions, the Oakland A's of the American League.

Any sale would have to be approved by the Board of Trustees, which will convene today and Wednesday.

While off the court maneuverings occupied a large portion of attention, the East and West teams were to hold their one practice session today, prior to the seventh ABA All-Star game.

The East, seeking to avenge last year's 123-111 loss at Salt Lake City, tying the series 3-3, was favored because it boasted the league's two top scorers, forwards Dan Issel of Kentucky and Julius Erving of New York, and the ABA's No. 1 rebounder, 7-2 Artis Gilmore of Kentucky.

The West will open with forwards George McGinnis of Indiana and Willie Wise of Utah, center Mel Daniels of Indiana and guards Jimmy Jones of Utah and Warren Jabali of Denver.

Tag team action highlights card

The tag team tandem of Bob Brown and Tokyo Joe will take on Ronnie Etchison and Mike George in tonight's main event on the Convention Hall wrestling card.

Danny Little Bear will face Lord Alfred Hayes in the semifinal while The Viking returns to local action in a match against Baron Scicluna in the special event. The 8:30 p.m. opener finds Brown and Etchison in a one-fall bout.

Scotty Bowman miffed

NHL All-Stars meet tonight in Chicago

CHICAGO (AP) — Montreal's Scotty Bowman, forced to coach an injury-riddled and undermanned East squad in Tuesday night's National Hockey League All-Star game, leveled a blast at fellow Coach Emile Francis of the New York Rangers on the eve of the classic.

With five players sidelined, including Boston's Bobby Orr, Bowman asked the Rangers for the services of Rod Gilbert and Walt Tkaczuk or Jean Ratelle.

All weekend the NHL office stated Gilbert would definitely play, but as the game neared it was learned none of them would be available.

"I find it hard to believe players will refuse to play considering the chance to win a car, the money and glory involved in playing in an All-Star game," said Bowman. "I guess Francis is looking towards the future."

In addition to Orr, the original players who will miss the game are Montreal defensemen Guy LaPointe and Serge Savard, Montreal forward Jacques Lamaire and Buffalo center Gil Perreault.

Bowman has as definite replacements center Henri Richard of Montreal and Vancouver defenseman Jocelyn Guevremont, which gives him a total of 15 players out of a 20-man limit.

He listed as "possible" forward Red Berneson of Detroit and defensemen Larry Robinson of Montreal and Jim McKenny of Toronto. If this trio shows, the East will have 18 players.

Originally the East figured to be the favorite in the game but under the circumstances the odds have turned in favor of the West squad, which will be coached by Billy Reay of the Chicago Black Hawks.

S-C jayvees pull upset in tournament opener

(Democrat-Capital Service)

CONCORDIA — The Smith-Cotton junior varsity upset fourth-seeded Santa Fe (Alma) High School in the opening round of the St. Paul's Invitational Basketball Tournament 47-43 Monday.

The Tigers, the only junior varsity club entered in the eight-team event, trailed by five as the fourth quarter opened. But a 13-point outburst and key defense, which held Santa Fe to only four points, paved the way into the championship semifinals.

Balanced scoring from Tom Buckner (12), Cliff Callis (12) and Pat Fiene (10), also lifted the Tigers.

Kevin Hilbrenner, who pumped in 12 points in the third quarter that helped wipe out the Bengals' 26-17 half time lead, wound up with 20 points to lead all scorers.

The jayvee Tigers will next see action in the tourney at 9:15 p.m. Thursday against first-seeded Lexington, which dumped Sweet Springs in Monday's other first-round game.

Scoring

Smith-Cotton Junior Varsity (47) — Buckner 12, Callias 12, Pat Fiene 10, Koetting 8, Newbill 5.
Santa Fe (43) — Hilbrenner 20, Stoneking 13, Banks 4, Lovercamp 4, Tieman 2.

Heavy drug use charges are leveled at San Diego

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Marijuana and cocaine were used by some San Diego Chargers football players last season, the San Diego Uion reported Monday night.

"Their recent use has involved a number of players, splitting the squad into camps of users and abstainers," the newspaper said in an article for Tuesday's edition. It said the article resulted from its own six-week investigation.

Former Charger receiver Chuck Dicus, who was dealt to Pittsburgh at mid-season, is quoted as saying:

"I have too many friends on the team. I don't want to say anything to endanger their careers. But it's bad, really bad."

An unnamed National Football League official called the Chargers "the cesspool of the league" in drug use.

Ron Waller, who served as interim coach in the last half of the 1973 season, said, "If there was a drug problem, I just didn't want to know about it."

He said the Chargers' 2-11-1 record, their worst ever, was due solely to the fact that "they didn't have a very good football club."

The team's alleged drug problems first came to light in documents filed in a suit by former Charger tackle Houston Ridge, saying pain-killers, amphetamines and anabolic steroids were easily available in the locker room during the late 1960s.

Ridge, who claimed improperly administered drugs helped cause a 1969 injury that ended his playing career, sued club officials and the NFL, and collected nearly $300,000 in a settlement.

Conlan fourth umpire elected

Conlan, Bottomley, Thompson into Hall

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. (AP)— John B. "Jocko" Conlan, as pugnacious in retirement as when he shouted down Leo Durocher and others who disagreed with his calls, took his election to baseball's Hall of Fame proudly Monday.

Two other recipients named Monday by the Hall's Veterans Committee, "Sunny" Jim Bottomley and Samuel "Big Sam" Thompson, will be inducted posthumously.

"I've received other awards, but to know that I'm in the Hall of Fame before I die is the tops of all," the 71-year-old former umpire said.

Conlan became the fourth umpire named to the Hall, joining Bill Klem, Tommy Connolly and Billy Evans. "I'm proud to think I'll be right next to my bosom pal, Bill Klem — the greatest umpire of us all," Conlan said. "I'm dedicating my book, 'Jocko' to him."

Conlan retired in 1964 after 24 years as an umpire and a half-century in baseball. The diminitive, outspoken Jocko derived his nickname from his constant chatter during his minor league career as a player.

Bottomley, a first baseman who died in 1959, set a major league record Sept. 16, 1924, by driving in 12 runs for the St. Louis Cardinals in a game against Brooklyn. He batted .310 in 14 seasons with St. Louis and Cincinnati in the National League and two with the St. Louis Browns of the American League before closing out his career as manager of the Browns in 1937.

Thompson, an outfielder who played all but eight games of his career before the turn of the century, died in 1922. He still owns the obscure mark of .923 runs per game batted in — ahead of such other Hall of Famers as Lou Gehrig's .920 and Hank Greenberg's .915 — and was the first National Leaguer to amass 200 hits and 300 total bases in a season.

Shopper picks at stores' wrongs

By POLLY CRAMER

DEAR POLLY — I will admit that it might be my age and old-fashioned ways that cause my Pet Peeve with the supermarkets. As pleasant as it may be to shop in nice stores with such a wide variety of goods there are many things that turn me off. There are dented cans and damaged merchandise, lack of sufficient help to keep shelves restocked, tendency to push their own brands over other long-standing favorites some of us like, cartons stacked in the aisles so the cart will not go through, smudged price markings thus causing possible errors at the checkout counter and "specials" that are seldom wanted and used.

Finally we get to the checkout counter. After rushing with my shopping all my haste is wasted as I wait and wait. Long lines of shoppers with piled up carts back up with only a few stalls open. This causes the clerks to work so quickly they often make mistakes which are difficult to reconcile after one has gotten home. Then there are those carts in the parking lots and car owners who permit their car doors to bump into the next car and often dent it. Frankly, I dread shopping at supermarkets and am not alone in my gripes. — MRS. F.J.K.

DEAR POLLY — I think April J. will find that the law says anyone who interferes with the welfare of the entire neighborhood (for example, a pond that is not cleaned and has an offensive odor or shooting fireworks in the street or operating an illegal still) constitutes a public nuisance. She and her neighbors could seek a public injunction or court order against them. If it only interferes with your enjoyment of your private property you might find the sanitation laws are being broken. Talk to an official in your community. — MRS. H.

DEAR POLLY — I keep about a dozen small pebbles in a jar in my kitchen and use them for cleaning the insides of small jars and vases. Add a little water and soap and shake it up until all traces of dirt are gone. — RUTH.

DEAR POLLY — I have suggested for economy-minded homemakers which includes most of us today. Instead of throwing away worn sheets I make pillowcases out of them and seldom have to buy new ones. The sides of a sheet are usually good. I cut from the edges in to get the proper size and allow for seams on the sides and any size hem wanted. — JANET.

Polly's problem

DEAR POLLY — I would like to know how to clean the arms on a velvet upholstered chair safely. — M.M.

Nixon proposal on pay raises exceeds guidelines

WASHINGTON (AP) — Pay raises of 7 per cent that exceed Cost of Living Council guidelines are in store for high-level public servants under President Nixon's fiscal 1975 budget proposal.

Once formally proposed, the pay raises for congressmen, Cabinet members and top-level federal administrators are likely to begin in March, with additional increments in 1975 and 1976. The only action that could stop Nixon's intent is a negative vote by Congress within 30 days after the proposal reaches Capitol Hill.

Nixon's budget proposal is scheduled to be sent to Congress Monday.

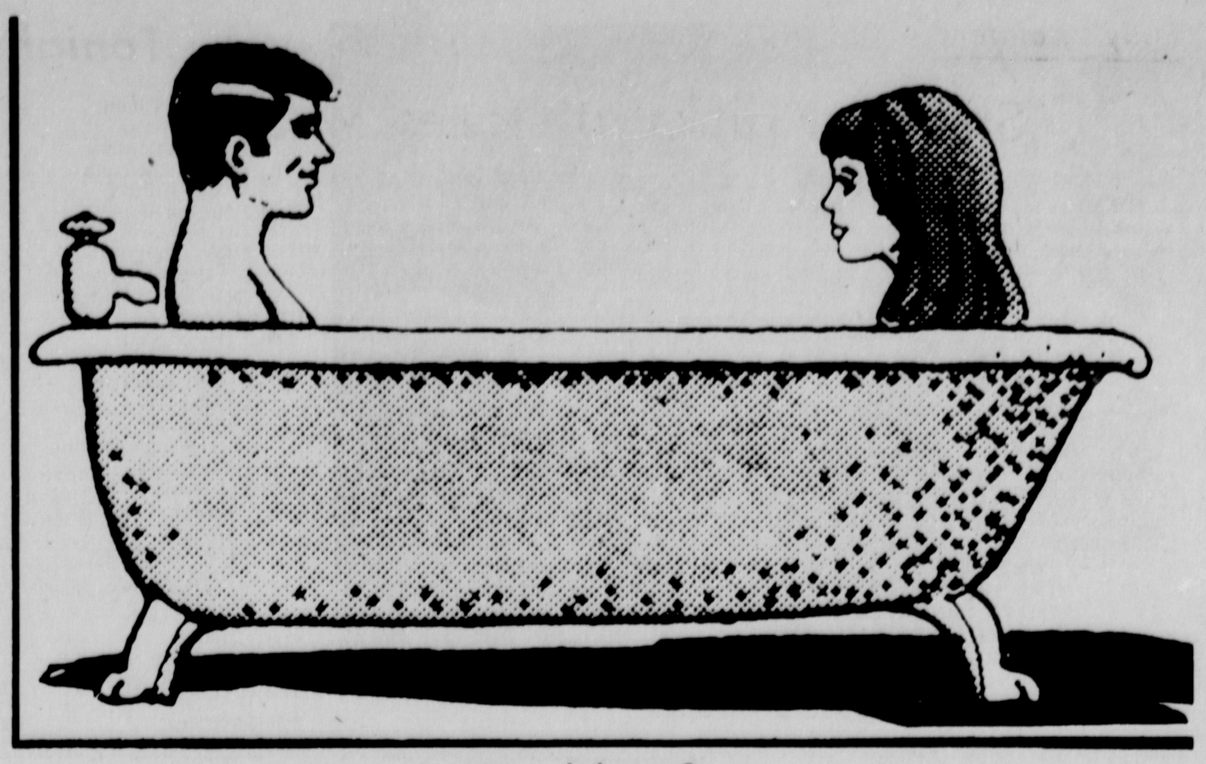

The salary increases would be the first of their kind since 1969.

Under the proposal Cabinet officers would have their pay raised about $4,000 this year, with additional raises in the next two years. They now earn $60,000.

Congressmen would receive a raise of $3,500 in early March, bringing them close to $46,000 annually. There would be additional raises in 1975 and 1976 unless Congress rejects the plan.

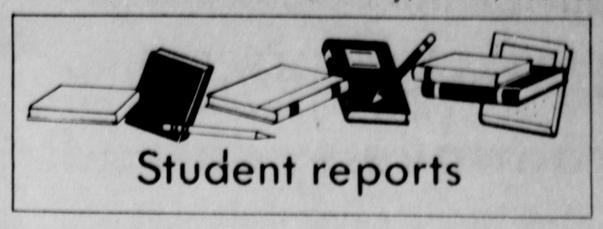

And similar increases would be forthcoming for high-level officials, including deputy secretaries, assistant secretaries and agency heads. Many top federal workers, whose pay has been frozen at $36,000 annually, also would receive pay boosts.

The Federal Pay Commission and the White House joined to prepare the pay-increase proposal. The commission, comprising industry officials, makes its recommendations to the White House and the President submits these to Congress.

Moral threat?

Two rings may be better than one, but the state-run fuel board in London has come under fire for using this advertisement. The ad, the winning entry in a national competition o how to save fuel, appeared with the caption: "Put a bit of romance into your bathing by sharing the water. You would be amazed how much gas you save." Two members of Parliament objected to the poster — which shows a couple bathing together — because they consider it "a threat to the moral life of the country."

Foreign banks control banking scene in Beirut

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Foreign banks are scrambling into the Beirut banking scene to get some of the new wealth flowing into Arab coffers as a result of oil price hikes.

The Arabs' take on the crude oil they sell the big Western companies has jumped more than 400 per cent in the past year, from $1.55 a barrel to $7. The Arab oil states are expected to earn about $50 billion dollars this year, and much of the money eventually will be channeled through Beirut.

At least five major foreign banks bought controlling shares in Lebanese banks in the past year, and at least seven others are shopping.

The newcomers in the past year include the Bank of America, American Fidelity and Chemical of New York. Banking sources say others lining up to get in include First National of Boston, Irving Trust, Manufacturers Hanover and Wells Fargo. Some have already opened offices.

At present, 42 of the 75 chartered banks here are controlled or owned by foreign interests. They account for 60 per cent of Lebanon's total bank deposits, which local bankers estimate at just under $2.8 billion.

But the lure for foreign banks here is not just deposits. Beirut as the Arab world's chief financial window also handles millions in investments, credits, development projects and other financial trading.

Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

Wears sweatshirt to bed each night

DEAR DR. LAMB — Your article about bursitis prompts me to suggest something to your readers that I discovered several years ago by accident. I suffered from bursitis for many years. Extremely painful shoulders caused me to have to exercise each morning, but the exercise was painful and time-consuming. One cold night I wore a sweatshirt to bed and discovered the next norning that my shoulders felt better than they had in years.

Cool nights in the Southwest and cold winters in the East probably expose many people to situations similar to mine. People don't realize that with conventional blankets on our beds that our shoulders are frequently exposed to the night cold without our being aware that they are much colder than the rest of our bodies.

My acquaintances often kid me about the habit I have developed of wearing a sweatshirt to bed, but I can assure you that it works very well to ward off aching shoulders. My condition had been diagnosed by a physician as bursitis, and I was told that the only thing to do was to continue the exercises that were already a part of my daily routine.

DEAR READER — An excellent suggestion. Many readers have found that warm socks at night help prevent leg cramps. Cooling the muscles leads to muscle cramps and stiffness. I'm sure that a warm garment over the shoulders and neck could help a number of people. In this winter of fuel crises your suggestion is particularly welcome.

DEAR DR. LAMB — In reference to your column on the mother who was an alcoholic, my family was appalled that you made absolutely no mention of Alcoholics Anonymous. This organization and its related group, Al-Anon, help millions of families that haven't found the least bit of comforting advice in a psychiatrist's office.

Alcoholism is an illness — not a sign of severe problems. It might be to your advantage to become better informed about Alcoholics Anonymous and, if you see fit, in the future give more prudent and realist advice to those in need of help! I, myself, am not a member of A.A.

DEAR READER — Don't get so excited! If you were a regular reader of my columns you would know that I have previously recommended both Alcoholics Anonymous and Al-Anon. The latter, as you know, is for the families of persons with an alcoholic problem. I think they are both fine organizations, and both serve a real need.

Now, won't you admit you overstated your case a little bit? And, won't you consider that regardless of your own experience with alcoholics, perhaps in your family, that not all such problems are alike. Alcohol is often part of a serious psychological problem needing psychiatric help. Individuals who have evidence of real psychological problems, as the mother in the case you asked about did, need professional help. Why try to downgrade either the psychiatrist or Alcoholics Anonymous. Both serve a useful purpose. (NEA)

Ann Landers

Daughter stops writing mother

Dear Ann Landers: I know I will never see this in print because you don't believe people like my mother exist. Well, I'm writing to you anyway. It will make me feel better.

My mother drove me absolutely nuts. We moved 1,100 miles away in the interest of self-preservation. That still didn't prevent her from making my life miserable — by mail.

She wrote nearly every day, giving me hell for something I said or did 25 years ago. Every letter described a new illness. Last year she was sure she was dying of cancer. I phoned her doctor and he said it was ridiculous. Her tests were perfect.

After that scare I let her have it. I told her that I hope I will have her strength and vigor when I am her age — that she should be thankful and stop complaining. Her reply: "If you can't write a decent letter to your sick, old mother, I'd rather not hear from you."

I took her at her word and stopped writing. I send a gift on her birthday and at Christmas and she receives a plant for Mother's Day, but we have no other communication. Maybe I'm a rotten kid in your book but at least my stomach is no longer tied in knots and I don't shake when I see the mailman coming. — Free At Last

Dear Free: There are some extremely exasperating mothers in this world, and to pretend they don't exist is sheer lunacy. But it's too bad you didn't get some therapy years ago and learn to cope with the situation instead of running away from it.

Children can't change their parents but they can unload their anger on professionals, get to know the whys and wherefores and learn to insulate themselves against a punitive, domineering or dependent relative.

It's difficult but not impossible to love the "unlovable," and they, of course, are the ones who need love most.

Dear Ann Landers: How about printing the other side to the "Blistered Ear Lobes" sad story? She's the gal who sold magazine subscriptions on the phone and was cussed out regularly for "a lousy $2 an hour."

I'm Average Joe Citizen. I am sick and tired of being blasted by billboards, neon signs, TV and radio commercials, newspaper and magazine ads night and day. To, have my personal telephone used as a cheap method for selling is an invasion of privacy and it burns me up.

I invariably get those pesky phone pitches when I'm in the shower, eating, or reading something fascinating or trying to sleep. (My wife is a nurse and we both work irregular shifts.) People should be able to leave their lines open for important calls and not have to pull out the jack in self-defense.

I agree with "Lobes" that foul language is inexcusable, but I can see how those calls could make a person lose his temper. I have a stock answer. Here it is: "This is a private phone for MY convenience. It is not intended for soliciting." Then I boycott the product.

If you are fair, I will see this in print. — Phone Weary

Dear Weary: A surprising number of readers agree with you. I'll tell you what I told them.

You have a right to privacy and you can insure it by getting an unlisted number. It is, however, a legal method of selling and some people appreciate the convenience of buying something over the telephone.

Planning a wedding? What's right? What's wrong? Ann Landers' completely new "The Bride's Guide" will relieve your anxiety. To receive a copy, send a dollar bill, plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope (16 cents postage) to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 3346, Chicago, Illinois 60654.

Neighbors get credit for fighting fire

(Democrat-Capital Service)

WINDSOR — Quick action by neighbors was instrumental in containing a fire at the home of Raymond Silversmith, about four miles southeast of here, late Monday night.

According to a spokesman for the Pettis County Fire Department, the fireplace flu in the house burned out and set a wall on fire inside the house.

Silversmith's neighbors poured water down the chimney in an effort to contain the fire. The fire department listed the damage as "minor" and said the fire was contained to the wall.

Fire and smoke damage were estimated at $600 to $800, but indicated that it "could have been a lot worse."

Silversmith and his family were home at the time the fire broke out. No injuries were reported.

Enrollment forces closing of school

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Declining enrollment has forced the closing of Xavier High School for girls after 43 years of operation.

Sister Margaret Geraghty, academic administrator of the private Roman Catholic school, said Monday that a 40 per cent drop in enrollment and further projected declines caused officials to decide to close at the end of the current school year.

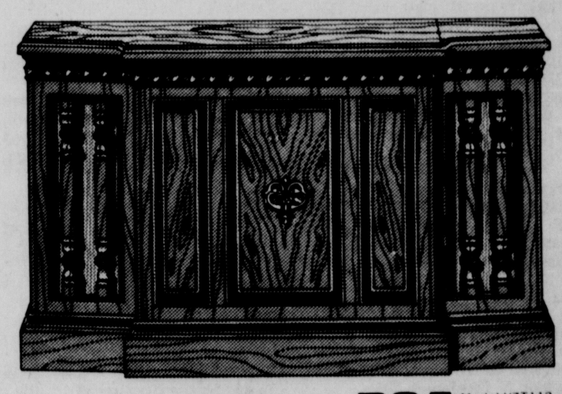

The school currently has seven lay teachers and 24 sisters of Charity of the Blessed Virgin Mary.

Lutheran seminary controversy spreads

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The controversy which has all but closed Concordia Seminary spread further Monday night as members of the executive staffs of other departments within the Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod met to discuss the situation and determine their course of action.

"We met, but I came out filled with frustration and disappointment," said the Rev. Dr. Harold Rast, executive editor of parish education. "I expected more solid action, but it seems like the synodical staff isn't yet ready to get itself together and take a hard line. I guess they will have to feel the crunch before they act."

Dr. Rast said the meeting of all synodical departments was called Monday night in an effort to resolve what appears to be a growing split in the ranks of the church, with conservative and moderate members taking different points of view on church doctrine.

The crisis came to a head last week when the conservative majority on the Board of Control of Concordia Seminary suspended Dr. John H. Tietjen as seminary president and replaced him with Dr. Martin Scharlemann, a self-avowed conservative biblical professor.

Seminary students and 46 of the 51 members of the permanent faculty at the school began a boycott of classes early last week and pledged not to return until the issue of Dr. Tietjen's suspension was favorably resolved.

Classes were ordered opened Monday morning by the school's board, but only two teachers and about 30 students out of about 420 on campus showed up. Dr. Scharlemann said Monday he believed it would take at least two weeks for the campus to return to normal.

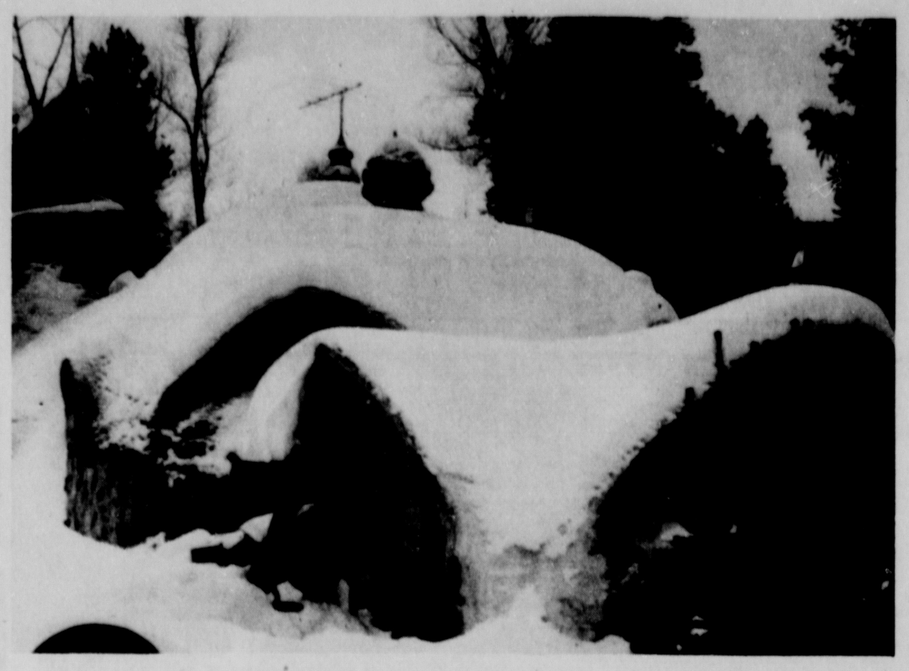

Dr. Jacob A. O. Preus, president of the synod, said Monday that it was not likely the board would reverse its decision on Dr. Tietjen's suspension. "I just don't think that's in the cards," Dr. Preus said.

The synod president came under more fire yesterday when the staff of the church's missions board criticized him for not intervening in the termination of duties of the Mission Board's area secretary for South Asia, Dr. James Mayer. Mission staff officials criticized Dr. Mayer's dismissal and said the staff would disregard Mission Board directives that were not consistent with the synod's philosophy on missions.

Dr. William Kohn, executive secretary to the missions board, called a new board plan of operations "an outright attempt to declare the Mission Affirmation of the synod inadequate and unacceptable."

Dr. Rast said he believed actions similar to the dismissal of Dr. Tietjen and Dr. Mayer will soon be felt in other synodical departments.

"When the other departments begin to feel the crunch, they will take a firm stand," Dr. Rast said.

House of foam

Builder Stuart "Boots" Gordon says that the home of polyurethane foam which he built (pictured here) is the home of the future. Gordon says the curved surfaces of the home make for a happier home owner and the shape blends into the natural landscape. Gordon plans to build the homes in triplex units, each consisting of two bedrooms, at one-third normal building costs. This home is in Dillon, Colo. (UPI)

Standard oil reports its earnings

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Standard Oil Co. of Indiana, the nation's sixth largest, said Monday its earnings rose from $374.7 million in 1972 to $511 million last year, or a 35 per cent jump. Fourth quarter profits rose 53 per cent.

Two smaller firms — Murphy Oil Corp of El Dorado, Ark., and Skelly Oil Co. of Tulsa — also reported increased profits.

Skelly said its 1973 net profits were $44 million, 17 per cent above the 1972 total. Total sales and other income was reported at $636 million up 8.4 per cent over the year before.

Murphy Oil reported profits rose 275 per cent to $53.59 million in 1973 compared with $14.28 million in 1972. Fourth quarter earnings were four times as great as the previous year, rising to $18.99 million.

Standard Oil of Ohio (Sohio), the 16th largest in the nation, said earlier its earnings rose 23 per cent in 1973 over the previous year.

Earlier this month, Exxon Corp. said it made a 59 per cent increase in profits last year; Mobil Oil Co. reported 47 per cent; and Texaco 45 per cent.

Continuing fertilizer problem is forecast

WASHINGTON (AP) — An Agriculture Department specialist says the tight supply situation in fertilizer will continue for at least another year.

But Richard B. Reidinger says higher prices for nutrients is stimulating fertilizer plant construction in many parts of the world.

Reidinger, of the department's Economic Research Service, said in a report issued today that a "logjam of circumstances" has created the fertilizer crunch. The foremost reason has been soaring global demand for additional chemicals, he said.

Rich and poor countries alike have been using more fertilizer to boost crop production, a demand that has caused prices to skyrocket as supplies fail to keep pace.

The energy crisis is also a factor because petroleum and natural gas are prime sources for chemical components.

"Theoretically, the abrupt reduction in fertilizer availability in developing countries could reduce potential for building food self-sufficiencey," Reidinger said. "In developed countries, declining imports of fertilizer could draw down yields and acreage planted, necessitating higher imports of agricultural products."

Reidinger said rising fertilizer prices have helped spur interest in new plant construction in a number of countries, including expansion in the oil-rich Middle East where natural gas is readily available.

Exports of U.S. fertilizer soared last year as world prices jumped above domestic prices controlled by the Nixon administration. Those wraps were removed from fertilizer last Oct. 25, and higher U.S. prices have boosted shipments to farmers and other domestic users.

Agriculture Secretary Earl L. Butz says the fertilizer outlook for 1974 has improved since last fall.

"At that time, fertilizer manufacturers agreed to divert to domestic markets 1.5 million tons of fertilizer which had been scheduled for export, to do what they could to keep marginal plants in production and open closed plants, and to speed up completing of fertilizer plants under construction," Butz said recently.

"We have some indication that fertilizer sales to farmers during the fall of 1973 were substantially above sales for the same period in 1972," he said.

Butz conceded, however, the supply for nitrogen and phosphate fertilizers will remain extremely tight in 1974 and promised to monitor the situation closely.

Domestic policy message

WASHINGTON (AP) — A lengthy written message on domestic policy will be sent to Congress by President Nixon Wednesday, the same day he makes his State of the Union address, spokesmen say.

The President is scheduled to make the nationally broadcast address Wednesday night before a joint session of Congress.

Deputy Press Secretary Gerald L. Warren said Monday the written statement, reportedly nearly 100 pages long, will expand on the speech.

Warren declined to discuss the contents of either the written or oral reports.

And in New York, the CBS, NBC and ABC television networks say they will provide one hour of air time Friday night for the Democratic party response to Nixon's State of the Union speech.

The networks announced Monday that during the program Sen. Mike Mansfield, D-Mont., the Senate majority leader, would read a prepared statement and then be questioned by newsmen invited by the Democratic National Committee.

Friday's program, to be broadcast live beginning at 10 p.m. EDT, will include summaries and analyses by newsmen for each network, according to network officials.

Nixon's State of the Union message is to be televised live by all three networks 9 p.m. EDT Wednesday.

Chiefs set home preseason games

KANSAS CITY (AP) — The Kansas City Chiefs of the National Football League announced their 1974 home preseason schedule Tuesday.

The Chiefs will open at home against the Detroit Lions Monday night, Aug. 5 and close the preseason slate against St. Louis Friday night Sept. 6 in the annual intrastate Governor's Cup game, Jack Steadman, general manager, said.

The San Francisco 49ers will make their first appearance in Kansas City on Saturday, Aug. 24. On Monday night, Aug. 12, the Buffalo Bills will appear in Arrowhead Stadium.

Steadman said the Chiefs would have two preseason contests on the road Aug. 17 and Aug. 31, but the opponents would not be announced until later.

Proposed AT&T rate changes being opposed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Defense Department has objected to proposed rate changes by American Telephone & Telegraph Co., claiming they would cost the federal government another $600,000 a year "without any additional benefits whatsoever."

The Defense Department asked to enter the case in a petition filed on behalf of all federal agencies.

Under the plan AT&T wants to drop uniform mileage charges on leased lines reserved by business for their exclusive use. This would be replaced by a two-tier system with lower rates between 370 major cities and higher rates for routes to other communities.

The changes are opposed by competing microwave transmission firms and by large news agencies, including The Associated Press. They contend they would be hurt unfairly by the changes.

St. Louis man is charged in shotgun slaying

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Raymond Jackson, 23, has been booked on suspicion of murder in connection with the Monday night shotgun slaying of a neighbor in a West St. Louis apartment.

Police said Eddie Spurlock, 24, was found with a shotgun wound in his chest by officers investigating reports of a shooting outside Spurlock's apartment building. He died about an hour after the shooting, authorities said.

Police said they arrested Jackson after seeing him run from the scene with a sawed-off shotgun. He was caught after a short chase on foot.

The shooting apparently followed a dispute in which Spurlock accused Jackson of stealing from his apartment, authorities said.

People in the news

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger apparently has scrubbed hopes for a week-long vacation in the Mexican resort city of Acapulco early next month.

The secretary of state had hoped to spend a week at Acapulco after a probable trip to Panama about Feb. 7 to sign a new declaration of principles for operation of the Panama Canal.

But U.S. officials said Monday that Acapulco is out until after an international energy conference scheduled in Washington Feb. 11. And on Feb. 20 Kissinger is scheduled to attend a hemisphere meeting in Mexico City.

Officials said he might try to work in a few days at Acapulco before or after the Mexico City meeting, but they said he has no fixed vacation plans and might pass up a vacation entirely.

WASHINGTON (AP) — A White House spokesman says President Nixon is feeling fine and has not rescheduled a 1973 physical checkup which had been posponed because he is too busy.

Deputy Press Scretary Gerald L. Warren also dismissed on Monday reports that the President has been having difficulty getting a full night's sleep.

Warren said he had talked to both Nixon and the President's chief physician, Dr. Walter R. Tkach, and "I can tell you unequivocably he is sleeping well."

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon has designated Arthur F. Burns to be chairman of the Federal Reserve System for another four years.

Burns, whose 14-year appointment to the Fed's board of governor's extends until 1984, was first designated chairman by Nixon on Jan. 31, 1970.

ZURICH, Switzerland (AP) — Canada's Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau has arrived in Switzerland for a week of skiing at St. Moritz.

Trudeau, who flew in Monday, will attend the World Alpine Skiing Championships and then go onto Salzburg, Austria, for a meeting of the Club of Rome.

The organization was formed after the signing of the European Common Market treaty in the Italian capital and deals primarily with economic projections of the Rome area. It is composed of economists, scientists, industrialists and planners.
